THE

STANLEY FAMILIES

At the urgent request of members of the Stanley family in Britain, Conn., & New Haven, Conn., I have undertaken the preparation of this volume. It is true that researches of the kind were not altogether unknown, but it was a task which I had from time to time gathered in great mass, material sufficient to a place in such a work, but exceeded as I was by an absorbing profession, which

OF AMERICA

JOHN, TIMOTHY, AND THOMAS STANLEY

expenses, and the time which I could give to it, so that I did not taking myself, and my wife, and my children, who will be greatly will know full well what I mean, I have not been able to appreciate their interest fully described.

1636.

In no wise do I regret the work to those interested in them, I can only say that I have done the best I could. I have no desire to go into the details of some similar volumes.

COMPILED BY

ISRAEL P. WARREN, D.D.

It would be difficult to estimate the ramifications of descent, cousins, or the Stanley blood. The Stanley daughters, who by marriage lost that name, became, by so doing, incorporated into other family lines, many of them of high positions and repute, the history of which would be extremely interesting; but the magnitude of the task involved in tracing them out for this purpose, would be greater than I could assume.

Neither was it practicable to include, in connection with the various names, a large number of genealogical and historical matter

P R E F A C E .

AT the urgent request of members of the Stanley family in New Britain, Conn., I was persuaded to undertake the preparation of this volume. It is true that researches of the kind were not altogether uncongenial to my taste, and I had from time to time gathered a good many materials suitable to a place in such a work. But occupied as I was by an absorbing profession, which demanded all my resources of time and strength, I really was unable to give to this that patient, protracted, I may add, expensive course of investigation which the nature of the undertaking required. Those who have had experience in such labors will know full well what I mean; those who have not, will scarcely appreciate them, however fully described.

In now giving the results of my work to those interested in them, I have only to say that I have done the best I could. I have not attempted to make it as exhaustive as some similar volumes have been. My aim has not been to follow the ramifications of descent outside of the Stanley name. The Stanley daughters, who by marriage lost that name, became, by so doing, incorporated into other family lines, many of them of high position and repute, the exhibition of which would be extremely interesting, but the magnitude of the task involved in tracing them out for this purpose, would be greater than I could assume. Neither was it practicable to include, in connection with the various names, a large mass of biographical and historical matter which had been collected. The members of this family, though less conspicuous on the page of history in this country than in England, have, nevertheless, as a whole, been inferior to few descended from the Puritan emigration of the same date.

It would, of course, be idle to pretend to entire accuracy in a work of this kind. Some typographical errors were discovered before the press work was completed. Others have been disclosed by fuller returns received since the manuscript was compiled. These are noted in an Appendix. Here also have been placed whatever additions have come to my knowledge since the printing was begun. Doubtless many more addenda of both sorts will need be made hereafter, which, if deemed important, may, as in many similar cases, be supplied in a supplementary sheet.

It is my pleasure and duty alike to acknowledge the assistance which has been rendered to this undertaking by Mr. Allyn Stanley Kellogg, of Hartford, Conn. He had been doing something in the way of collecting data respecting the branch of the family to which he belongs, but very kindly put them at my service in the larger task I had undertaken. His help has been invaluable also in correcting proofs, and by counsel in arranging and verifying the materials. He is entitled to the earnest thanks of all the Stanleys for his aid.

I should mention also in the same line of acknowledgment, the aid of Isaac L. Stanley esq., of Dubuque, Ia., who seems to possess a large share of the facts, traditional and otherwise, pertaining to the late generations of the family in New Britain and Farmington. Had I inserted all the anecdotes and recollections of individuals furnished by him, the volume would have been much larger than it is.

OTHER STANLEY FAMILIES.

In the progress of the inquiries connected with this undertaking, it soon became apparent that there were other Stanleys in America than those of the Hartford families. It was for a time my purpose to include these in the present volume, and a large amount of material was gathered with relation to it. It was found at last, however, that the work would become unreasonably large by doing so, and be attended with a cost, both of labor and expense, beyond what I could well afford to give; hence I concluded at length to issue this volume as it is, reserving the facts relating to other lines for separate use, if there shall ever be a sufficient call for them. Of these other families of Stanleys there were three which may be briefly indicated here.

MATTHEW STANLEY.

He was of Lynn, Mass., in 1646, where it is recorded of him, in Mass. Hist. Coll., as follows: "Matthew Stanley was fined £5, with 2s. 6d cost, for winning the affections of John Tarbox his daughter without her parents' consent. The latter were allowed 6s for their attendance in court for 3 days." Samuel Stanley, a son of Matthew, born in 1656, was of Topsfield, Mass. He had eight children, of whom six sons went to Attleborough and settled near the Falls. One son, Benjamin, removed to Haverhill. From these have descended a large number of families residing in Eastern Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut, and in later generations in New Hampshire and Maine, especially in the latter.

GEORGE STANLEY

Was of Essex, Mass., in the latter part of the seventeenth century. He was a shipmaster, but resided in Essex, where he left an estate. His descendants spread through Northern New England, and are now found most abundantly in the western part of Maine. Prof. Richard C. Stanley, of Bates College, is of this family.

JOHN WRIGHT STANLEY

Resided in Newbern, N. C., in 1780, where he was a merchant and an extensive owner of shipping. He married a daughter of Richard Coydell, so prominent in the early days of the Revolution, and had two sons, John and James G. John Stanley was a lawyer and member of Congress in 1801-3, and 1809-11, and had Edward, who was a Whig member of Congress in 1836-42; 1849-53; removed to San Francisco in 1853, where he was military Governor of the State, and died in 1875. A brother of his is Commodore Fabius Stanley, of the U. S. Navy. A large number of descendants of this family are found principally in the Southern States.

THE STANLEY FAMILIES.

THE question is often asked by those who bear the name of STANLEY in this country, "How are we related to those of the same name in the mother country, and can the relationship to any branch of the English family of Stanleys be clearly proved?"

It is a cause of much regret that the question cannot be answered with all the certainty desirable. The emigrant ancestors of the various families of the name, so far as we know, left no record of their English homes or connections. The separation to which they doomed themselves from their whole preceding lives was as complete as if it had been made by death. Neither have there been discovered sufficient data in the mother country to positively identify them there, although, as will presently be shown, there seems to be in one case a very strong probability in their favor. Nor should this surprise us even if we knew, what cannot at all be doubted, that they were from some branch of the eminent family whose name they bear. It is quite self-evident that the more conspicuous branches,—the noblemen and courtiers who were in high places in the aristocracy and the church,—would not be found forsaking their dignities, and casting in their lot with the despised Puritans who sought beyond the sea a refuge from the oppressions of both. They were, it is safe to assume, descendants of humbler lines,—of younger sons, probably, who, because they were such, were landless and comparatively poor. The laws of primogeniture and entail placed the landed estates in the hands of the elder sons, who inherited both titles and lands. It is for this reason so hard to trace the pedigree of these untitled children, who were assumed to have no pedigree, and whose names were ordinarily not mentioned in the family annals. I do not mean by this that it would be impossible to determine the origin of all our American Stanleys. Every known fact of their history is in harmony with the assumption that they belonged to the great English family, and that that connection could be positively discovered by persistent search under persons skilled in this kind of investigation. I warmly commend it to the consideration of all the Stanleys, among whom there is certainly no lack of pecuniary ability, to unite in instituting such a search. The expense of it, I believe, need not be large.

Before, however, we dwell upon the connection between the families on the two sides of the water, it will be of interest to give a brief view of those in the mother land.

THE ENGLISH FAMILY.

In the county of Stafford, in the heart of England, there was in very ancient times an old Saxon manor called STONELEY, a name compounded of stone, and leah or ley (modern, lea), meaning a stony meadow or field. There is still in that country a considerable town named Stone, which very probably, like the former, may bear a remembrance of the rugged surface of what is now one of the chief mining districts of the island. At the time of the conquest, this estate belonged to Saxon Sir Henry de Stoneley, the place of his residence in that day supplying the surname of the owner.

Among the Norman knights who accompanied William the Bastard into England in 1066, were Adam de Alditheley and his two sons, Lydulph and Adam. These received, as did others of William's associates, large possessions from the conquered lands as a reward for their services. Lydulph, the elder son, had a son Adam, and Adam, the younger, had a son William. These two young Normans, Adam and William, both married wives of the Saxon family De Stoneley.

Adam de Alditheley married Mabella, daughter of Sir Henry de Stoneley, and received with her as her marriage portion the two adjacent estates of Stoneley and Balterley. They were ancestors of the noble family of Audley, so called by a shortening of their name from Alditheley to Aldethley and Audley.

William de Alditheley married Joan, daughter of Thomas de Stoneley, a kinsman of Sir Henry, and received with her as a dowry the manor of Thalk, in the same county. Afterwards he exchanged this estate with his cousin Adam for Stoneley and half of Balterley, and made Stoneley his family residence; and in honor of his lady, and the great antiquity of her family, of noble Saxon descent, who flourished many years before the conquest, he assumed the surname of STANLEY, and became the recognized founder of the Stanley family. This was in the reign of Henry I., A.D. 1100-1135.

THE HOUSE OF HOOTON.

XII.

SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, son of Sir William, Lord of Stourton, etc., married Margery, daughter and heiress of William de Hooton, in Cheshire. From them descended a distinguished succession of families, many of them intermarrying with leading houses of Cheshire and Lancashire, until the death of Sir Rowland Stanley, who died in 1613, and was buried at Eastham, being one of the oldest knights of England at the time of his decease. His son William fell into disrepute by espousing the claims of Philip of Spain, the widowed husband of Queen Mary, as against Elizabeth, and assisting him as far as was in his power in preparing and guiding the Invincible Armada in its attempted invasion of England. Of course he was not allowed to reside in England after that, but retired to the Netherlands, then part of the dominions of Philip, where he was appointed governor of Mechelin, and died. Sir Rowland Stanley was succeeded by his great grandson William, (first baronet) then only seven years old. From him the succession was as follows :

30. SIR WILLIAM STANLEY was created a baronet June 17, 1662. He married Charlotte, eldest daughter of Sir Richard Molyneux, of Sefton, Lancashire, created Viscount Molyneux in the peerage of Ireland, and was succeeded by his son,

31. SIR ROWLAND STANLEY. He married Anne, daughter of Clement Paston, Esq., of Berningham, Norfolk, and was succeeded at his decease in 1737, by his son,

32. SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, who married Catharine, daughter of Rowland Eyre, Esq., of Hassop, Derbyshire. His son was,

33. SIR ROWLAND STANLEY, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Parry, Esq., of Pyrthymean, Flintshire.

34. SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, his son, married Barbara, daughter of John Towneley, but died without issue in 1792, when the title reverted to his uncle,

35. SIR JOHN STANLEY. This gentleman assumed the additional surname of Massey, under the will of Rev. Thomas Massey, younger son of Sir William Stanley, the 3d baronet, who had himself adopted the name of Massey, as heir of Sir William Massey of Puddington, and the additional surname of Stanley, under the will of his nephew and predecessor. Sir John Stanley Massey Stanley married Mary, daughter of Thomas Clifton, Esq., of Lytham in Lancashire, and was succeeded by his son,

36. SIR THOMAS STANLEY, who married Catharine, daughter of William Salvin, Esq., of Croxdale, Durham, and had five sons and a daughter.

37. SIR WILLIAM STANLEY, his son, died in 1803, during his minority.

38. SIR THOMAS STANLEY, brother of Sir William, succeeded him, who married Mary, daughter of Sir Carnaby Haggerston, county of Durham, and had three sons and a daughter. His eldest son was

39. SIR WILLIAM THOMAS STANLEY MASSEY STANLEY, who was born in 1807.

The seat of this family is at Hooton on the banks of the Mersey, near the eastern extremity of the hundred of Wirral, and commanding an extensive view of the river and the entire coast of Cheshire and Lancashire, to the sea.

THE DERBY LINE.

XIII.

SIR JOHN STANLEY. This, the most distinguished branch of the Stanley family of England, is reckoned as descended from SIR JOHN STANLEY, the younger brother of Sir William, of Hooton, of 1397. He married Isabel, daughter of Sir Thomas Lathom, knight, of Lathom, and Knowsley of Lancashire, and thus acquired those estates. In 1385 he was made lord-deputy of Ireland, and had a grant of the manor of Blake Castle in that kingdom. In the seventh year of Henry IV. he obtained a grant in fee of the Isle of Man, with all the isles adjacent, to be holden of the said king, his heirs and successors, by homage and the service of two falcons, payable on the days of their coronation. On the accession of Henry V. he was made a Knight of the Garter, and lord-lieutenant of Ireland, in which government he died Jan. 6, 1414. He left two daughters and four sons :

- 40 JOHN.
- 41 HENRY.
- 42 THOMAS of Elford, whence come the Stanleys of Elford, Pipe, etc.
- 43 RALPH.

40. SIR JOHN STANLEY, his son and heir, constable of Carnarvon, justice of Chester, and sheriff of Anglesea, married Isabel (or Elizabeth) daughter of Sir Robert Harrington, of Hornby, Lancashire, and had two daughters and three sons :

- 44 THOMAS,
- 45 RICHARD,
- 46 EDWARD,

the last two successively archdeacons of Chester.

44. SIR THOMAS STANLEY, his son, was lord-lieutenant of Ireland 1432, comptroller of the household and chamberlain to Henry VI., Knight of the Garter in 1456, etc. He married Joan, daughter of Sir Robert Goushill, by whom he had three daughters and four sons :

- 47 THOMAS.
- 48 WILLIAM. beheaded as a participator in the conspiracy to place Perkin Warbeck on the throne.
- 49 JOHN, of Weever, from whom descended the Stanleys of Alderly.
- 50 JAMES, archdeacon of Carlisle.

47. THOMAS STANLEY, first Earl of Derby. This eminent man was summoned to parliament in the first year of Edward IV., and married Eleanor, daughter of the Earl of Salisbury and sister to the Earl of Warwick, the famous "kingmaker," by whom he had six sons. The fifth of these named Edward, commanded the left wing of the English army at the battle of Flodden in 1513, which proved so fatal to the Scottish army. It was to him that the dying Marmion appealed in the famous lines of Scott's poem,

"Charge, Chester, charge ; on, Stanley, on,
Were the last words of Marmion."

For his service on that occasion the king bestowed upon him the title of Baron Monteagle, in allusion to the crest of the family.

The wife of Lord Thomas having died, he married for his second wife a very distinguished lady,—no less a personage than Margaret of Lancaster, mother of Henry VII. She had already been twice married, first to the Earl of Richmond, who died in 1456, father to Henry; and secondly to Sir Henry Stafford, the great Duke of Buckingham. Her third marriage to Lord Stanley was anything but a match for love, and it is said that it was contracted with the express stipulation that he should never occupy her bed.

It was now near the close of the terrible wars of the Roses for the English crown, between the rival houses of York and Lancaster. Lord Stanley had been an adherent of the White Rose of the House of York, but his present wife's son, Henry, Earl of Richmond, was the head of the House of Lancaster, and claimant of the throne. The usurping King Richard III., who, to secure his crown, had murdered the young King Edward V., and his brother the Duke of York and buried them under the stairs of the Tower, sought by honors and blandishments to attach the Stanleys to his side. At his coronation, July 6, 1473, Stanley's wife, the Countess of Richmond, bore the train of the queen. But all was in vain. The cruelties of Richard alienated his people, and prepared them for a revolution which should place Henry on the throne, and bring the fatal rivalry between York and Lancaster to an end by Henry's marriage with Elizabeth, Princess of York. To this scheme Lord Stanley gave his assent, but privately. When Henry's forces approached from the South, Stanley's men, of whom he had some five thousand, first marched in advance of them, as if retreating, but when they reached the battle-field at Bosworth, they went over to Henry's side. Richard, perceiving the defection, made a desperate charge upon his foes, cut his way to Henry's standard, killed Sir William Brandon, the standard-bearer, and was directing a deadly thrust at his rival, when Lord Stanley came to the rescue. Richard's troops fled at once, and he was thrown from his horse, and dispatched with many wounds. Stanley picked up his blood-stained and battered crown, and placed it on Henry's head, proclaiming him King of England. For these eminent services the new monarch advanced Lord Stanley, 27 Oct., 1485, to the dignity of the Earl of Derby, and constituted him one of the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High-Steward of England on the day of his coronation. His lordship, in the March following, had a grant of the high office of Constable of England for life. He had no children by his second marriage, and dying in 1504, was succeeded by his grandson,

51. THOMAS STANLEY, second earl, who married Anne, daughter of Lord Hastings, and was succeeded at his decease in 1521, by his son,

52. EDWARD STANLEY, third earl, K. G., Lord High-Steward at the coronation of Queen Mary, and chamberlain of Chester in the reign of Elizabeth, so celebrated for magnificence and liberality that Camden says, "that with Edward, Earl of Derby's death, the glory of hospitality seemed to fall asleep." His lordship died Oct. 24, 1574, and was succeeded by his eldest son by his first wife, Dorothy, daughter of the Duke of Norfolk,

53. HENRY STANLEY, fourth earl, K. G., one of the peers who sat upon the trial of Mary, Queen of Scots. He married Margaret, daughter of the Earl of Cumberland, and dying in 1592, was succeeded by his eldest son,

54. FERDINANDO STANLEY, fifth earl. He died suddenly April 16, 1594, supposed to have been poisoned by the Jesuits, having refused to join in an intrigue to obtain possession of the crown of France, by right of his grandmother, Mary, dowager queen of that kingdom. Having no sons, the earldom fell to his brother,

55. WILLIAM STANLEY, sixth earl. This nobleman bought from his nieces, daughters of Earl Ferdinando, their right to the Isle of Man. He married Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Earl of Oxford, and had four daughters and two sons. He was succeeded by his son,

56. JAMES STANLEY, seventh earl, born 31 Jan., 1606. He married Charlotte, daughter of Claude de la Tremouille, who became famous for her defense of Lathom House in 1644, when it was besieged by two thousand parliamentarians, and of the Isle of Man in 1651. This earl was distinguished for his attachment to the royal cause during the civil war, and falling into the parliament's hands after the battle of Worcester, was beheaded for treason Oct. 15, 1651. He was succeeded by his only son,

57. CHARLES STANLEY, eighth earl, born 19 Jan., 1627; married the maid of honor to the Queen of Bohemia; died in 1672. His successor was

58. WILLIAM RICHARD GEORGE STANLEY, ninth earl, who married Elizabeth, daughter of the Earl of Ossory. Having no sons he was succeeded by his brother,

59. JAMES STANLEY, tenth earl, who, dying without issue in 1736, the Isle of Man, the barony of Strange, created in 1627, devolved on the Duke of Atholl, and the earldom of Derby reverted to

60. EDWARD STANLEY, Bart., eleventh earl. He died 24 Feb., 1776, and was succeeded by his grandson,

61. EDWARD SMITH STANLEY, twelfth earl. He was lord-lieutenant of the county of Lancaster, and died 21 Oct. 1834, and was succeeded by his son,

62. EDWARD GEOFFREY SMITH STANLEY, thirteenth earl, K. G., F. L. S., etc., etc. He was created Baron Stanley of Bickerstaffe in 1832, and died June 30, 1851.

THE ALDERLEY LINE.

79. CATHARINE MARIA, m. Rev. Dr. Vaughan, head-master Harrow school.

We find the general character of the Stanley Families of England thus pithily summed up:

"They are a strange race, these Stanleys, and not precisely the men that the popular opinion formed during the agitation for the Reform Bill would make them out to be. Strong, brave, and efficient, with marvelous luck in marriage and at Court, they have owed their prosperity in no slight degree to a less winning power, so often and so successfully exerted that we may call it 'political divination.' They have almost always foreseen before other men the side which was going to win, and on that side at its moment of supreme triumph, the Stanley has usually appeared. The house, now perhaps the greatest among our Parliamentary families, the only one which in modern days has seated father and son at the same time in the Cabinet, now comprehends one baronetcy (Stanley, now Errington), of Hooton in Cheshire, representing the eldest branch, and two peerages, the earldom of Derby, of Knowsley in Lancashire, and the barony of Stanley, of Alderley in Cheshire, besides inferior branches at Dalgarth, in Cumberland, in Staffordshire, Sussex, Kent, and Hertfordshire." — "GOVERNING FAMILIES OF ENGLAND," by Sanford and Townsend.

The motto of the House of Stanley is
"SANS CHANGER."

THE HARTFORD EMIGRANTS.

THE beginning of our knowledge respecting the three ancestral brothers from whom the Stanley family of Connecticut is descended, is to be found in the following entry in the Massachusetts Colonial Records, Vol. I., p. 134.

"Att a Court, holden att Newe Towne, March 3, 1634. Whereas John Stanley dyed intestate, in the way to Newe England, & lefte three children vndisposed of, the yongest whereof is since diseased, haveing also lefte an estate of cxvj^l, in goods & chattells, &c., it is therefore ordered, with the consent of Thomas Stanley, brother to the said John, deceased, that hee shall haue forthwith the some of lvij^l of the s^d estate putt into his hands; in consideracon whereof, the said Thomas Stanley shall educate & bring vpp John Stanley, sonne of John Stanley, deceased, finding him meate, drinke, & app'ell, till hee shall accomplishe the age of xxi yeaeres, & att the end of the said tearme shall giue vnto the said John Stanley the some of ffifty pounds.

"Also, it is further ordered, with the consent of Tymothy Stanley, another brother of the afores^d John Stanley, deceased, that the other lvij^l of the aforesaid estate shalbe put into the hands of the said Tymothy Stanley, in consideracon whereof the said Tymothy shall educate & bring vpp Rueth Stanley, daughter of the afores^d John Stanley, deceased, findeing her meate, drinke, and app'ell, till shee shall attaine the age of one & twenty yeaeres; & att the end of the said tearme, or att the day of her marriage, with Tymothy Stanleyes consent, shall giue vnto the s^d Ruth Stanley the some of thirty pounds; provided if eyther of the said children shall dye before the expiracon of the said tearmes, then the p'ty whoe kept the said childe shall stand to the order of the Court for payeing soe much to the survyeying childe as the Court shall appoynt."

The date of the above order, according to our present mode of reckoning, is March 3, 1635. At that time the civil year began March 25, and the months of January, February, and so much of March, instead of being at the beginning of the year, were at its close. It is customary, in giving dates of that period, to put the last figure of the year in duplicate, or in the form of a fraction, thus, 1634-5, or 163 $\frac{1}{2}$. The date referred to is March 3d, of the year ending March 25, 1634, or of the year beginning January 1, 1635.

These families had arrived in Boston some nine months previous, in May, 1634; at least Timothy Stanley certainly and the others in all probability, for there is no reason to doubt that they all came together. There is on file among the Colonial papers at Hartford, a deposition from the wife of Timothy, who after his death married Andrew Bacon, which sheds some light on that subject.

"Elisabeth Bacon aged aboute seaventy one yeares testifieth that I come over ffrom old Engelande in a ship with Samuell Greenehill and his wife in the yeare one Thousand sixe Hundred and Thirty and ffoure, and wee arrived in New Englannde some time in Maye 34: I also doe well remember that goodwife Greenehill and myselfe did usually account thatt her son Thomas Greenehill and my son Timothy Stanly was of the same age and they did boath suck when they weare one ship boarde. And ffurder I doe testifie thatt my son Timothy was borne in Janewary was a twelve month before wee came oute of Englannde, w'ch was in Janewary one Thousande sixe hundred thirty and two. The above is without date or signature, in the handwriting of her son, Caleb Stanley.

Of the three brothers, John Stanley was probably a widower, since no mention was made of his wife or the mother of his children, whose ages were about ten, six, and four years respectively. It is barely possible that he had a second wife, Elizabeth Stanley, who married William Smith in Hartford in 1644, but as no mention is made of her in the court order respecting John Stanley's estate or children, the supposition seems improbable. Timothy Stanley, probably the second in age, had a wife and infant child; and Thomas Stanley, the youngest, a wife but no children. It is not a little remarkable that nothing beyond the bare fact is said of the elder brother's death, the time, or the circumstances of it.

Mrs. Bacon does not give the name of the vessel in which they came. Winthrop's Journal, under date of May 14, 1634, says, "The week the Court was (May 14-16), there came in six ships, with store of passengers and cattle." And ten days later he adds, "These ships by reason of their short passage had store of provisions left, which they put off at easy rates, viz., biscuit at 20 s. the hundred, beef at £6 per the hogshead, etc." Evidently the Stanleys came in one of these ships, after a short and prosperous voyage, which must have been very grateful to the young wife of Timothy, who had a nursing babe to care for.

Of their fellow-passengers on the ship Mrs. Bacon mentions Mr. Willard, Mr. Pantry, Mr. Crayfoot, and Samuel Greenhill, all except the last bearing what was then a designation of honor, the prefix "Mr." They were all persons "of good account" for wealth and social standing, and the evidently familiar terms in which she stood with them indicates that the Stanleys also, at least the elder, were recognized as of similar degree.

And this gives us a slight but perhaps not insignificant clew to the locality in England from which they came. Simon Willard, one of the founders of Groton, Mass., and a distinguished soldier in the wars against the Indians, was of Horsmonden in the county of Kent. Greenhill was of Staplehurst in the same county. Now Berry, in his "Kent Genealogies," records the residence of a Stanley family at that period in the immediate vicinity. I copy from that work as follows:

	JOHN STANLEY, of Wilmington, Co. Kent, a younger son of a family in the County of Lancaster.
	THOMAS STANLEY, son and heir.
	WILLIAM STANLEY, of Wilmington.
	JOHN STANLEY, = Dorothy, daughter of of Peckham Parva. Thomas Totesham, of Peckham.
JOHN STANLEY of London.	= Anna, dau. of — Latham of Newplace.	THOMAS = Margery, dau. of — Edgate, of Co. Essex.	WILLIAM = Audrey, dau. of Wm. Elstone.
	Ann, an infant, 1619.	Thomas Stanley, aged 4, 1619.	William Stanley, aged 2, 1619.

It needs but a glance at this table to show the striking resemblance of the names in it to those of our emigrant brothers. I cannot believe this resemblance to be accidental. Not only are the names John, Thomas, and William, repeated again and again, but the same thing was true in the generations descending from the brothers in this country. It would be too much to attempt to say precisely where they come into this old Kentish family, but that they belong to it somehow I think may safely be assumed, at least until there be some evidence to the contrary.

Impressed with this conviction, I addressed in August last a note of inquiry to the Rector of the parish Church of Wilmington, stating the problem before us, and asking for any information that the parish records may afford. To this note I received the following very courteous reply:

WILMINGTON VICARAGE, KENT,
Aug. 25, 1885.

Dear Sir:

I am in receipt of your letter of enquiry concerning the family of Stanley of this place. The emigration which you describe doubtless included the whole of the family. The register of the period of the migration has disappeared. It has not been seen for over one hundred years. A note exists that the oldest register had been eaten by mice. This doubtless would have covered the period in question, and would have been interesting as deciding the question of other American genealogies besides the one in which you are concerned.

The subsequent registers do not contain the name of Stanley at all, as far as I can see. This is a negative evidence; but it seems to indicate that the whole family departed.

If I can further your enquiries in any way, you may command me.

I remain very truly,

ROBERT JAMBLEN,

Vicar of Wilmington.

This letter seems to be confirmatory of the assumed connection of the emigrants with this family. A portion only of them resided at Wilmington, and if three brothers and possibly a sister removed together to New England, it would be likely to cause a disappearance of the entire family from that locality.

On the whole, then, I leave the subject with this general conclusion, that the Hartford Stanleys probably emigrated from the county of Kent, and were descended through a younger son from the great Lancashire families of that name. They were very certainly not of the noble line of Lord Derby, but had a remote connection with it through a distant collateral branch, sprung from a very early ancestry common to both.

The arms of the family in Kent were: "Argent, on a bend azure, three bucks' heads cabossed or, a chief gules. Crest: A demi-heraldic wolf, erased, argent, tufted, or."

Upon their arrival at Boston, the two brothers, with the orphan children of the deceased John Stanley, went with their fellow voyagers to make their homes in "Newe Town," now

Cambridge. There Timothy purchased a house in what is now Dunster street, near Harvard, numbered twenty-two on Paige's Plan of the settlement. It is not a violent conjecture that during the summer and the following winter they all resided there together. In March of the next spring they appeared before the court and took order for the disposition of the orphans, as above recorded. Possibly Ruth was found useful in taking care of the little Timothy, who may have been sickly, and did not live long. At any rate, she was assigned to the care of her uncle Timothy, while John was given to Thomas. The day succeeding the court order both Timothy and Thomas were admitted as "freemen" of the colony, and took the oath of allegiance March 4, 1634-5.

Shortly after this, Thomas Stanley, desiring a separate home, and finding Newtown already crowded, removed to Lynn, another settlement a few miles eastward, and became a townsman there. He was almost immediately chosen one of the deputies to the General Court from Lynn, and sat in that capacity September 2 of that year. The next year he was appointed constable, the stern executive officer of the colony, but he could not have served long as such, having moved away before June. A fine of ten shillings is recorded as having been imposed upon him June 27, 1636, for not appearing at court to assume his duties.

But another more important change in the history of the two families was now at hand. As early as May 15, 1634, it is on record: "Those of Newtown complained of strictness for want of land, especially meadow, and desired leave of the Court to look out either for enlargement or removal, which was granted. Whereupon they sent men to Agawam and Merrimac, and gave out they would remove." — Winthrop's History. At length a pioneer party of six fixed upon the banks of the Connecticut as the most eligible site, and after many delays and negotiations with the home authorities, it was decided to remove thither. The reason of their removal is thus quaintly told by Johnson in his "Wonder-working Providence."

"The Servants of Christ, who peopled the Towne of Cambridge were put upon thoughts of removing, hearing of a very fertill place upon the River of Canectico low Land, an well stored with Meddow, which is greatly in esteeme with th people of New England, by reason the Winters are very long. This people seeing that Tillage went but little on, Resolved to remove and breed up store of Cattell, which were then at eight and twenty pound a Cow, or neare upon, but assuredly the Lord intended far greater matters than man purposes, but God disposes these men, having their hearts gone from the Lord, on which they were seated, soone took dislike at every little natter, the Plowable plaines were too dry and sandy for them, and the Rocky places, although more fruitfull, yet to eate their bread with toile of hand, and how they deemed it unsupportable; And there fore they onely waited now for a people of stronger Faith than themselves were to purchase their Houses and Land, which in conceipt they could no longer live upon, and accordingly they met with Chapmen, a people new come, who having bought possessions, they highed them away to their new Plantation." — Mass. Hist. Coll., 2d Series, Vol. III., p. 150.

A church had been organized at Newtown about 1632, which after the fashion of the times had two ministers, a pastor and teacher, Rev. Thomas Hooker and Rev. Samuel Stone. They removed as a body, setting forth in the early summer of 1636. The description of the journey is graphically told by Stuart, the historian of Hartford.

"It was a morning in June, 1636, bright and early we may safely suppose, that this company was collected in Cambridge to begin its journey, — men, women and children, over a hundred, with packs or bundles, most of them, borne on the back or by the hand, and near them a few wagons and carts hitched to horses or oxen, and around a hundred and sixty head of cattle, and swine and goats and kids. The wagons and carts were loaded heavily, no doubt, for ample time had been given for preparation, and uncertainty as to the transmission of effects by sea, and the necessity in their plan of speedy recourse to them, must, we think, have induced the Emigrants to carry with them all that they could, at least in the way of house, and kitchen, and yard, and farming utensils.

"But they were doomed in one respect to disappointment. The journey they expected to make in five or six days occupied them a full fortnight. Think of making the same journey now in four hours! No record remains of their progress. We know, however, that it was through a pathless wilderness, the abode of wild beasts, and savages more wild than these. No roads, no fences, no bridges; mountains, ravines, swamps, thickets; the felling of trees, the filling up of hollows, the clipping of banks, the removal of rocks, the construction of rafts, the swimming of cattle; the bivouac on the hill, in the valley, amid the thatch of the meadow or the underbrush of the wood; the dark eternal forest, the howl of the wolf, the snarl of the bear, the cry of the panther, the hiss of the snake, the prow of the Indian,—these are the associations which paint but too truly the difficulty and the danger the Emigrants underwent. They had no guide but the compass, no cover but the heavens; the sun, their illuminator by day, the flare of their camp fires was their only light by night. The gun, the pistol, the sword, were almost constantly in their hands for game and for defense against danger.

"And so, on they came, the weary riding in wagons, the sick, as was Mrs. Hooker, borne on litters, the rest trudging resolutely on foot. On they came, these pioneers of the olden time, vocalizing the woods with the triple melody of their voices and axes and guns; the turf literally their 'fragrant shrine,' God's 'arch,' literally their 'temple,' till about the middle of the 'soft leafy month' of June, they stood on the banks of that river

— 'the sweetest of the chain
That links the mountain to the main.'

the fair, the noble, the glorious Connecticut." — Hartford in the Olden Time.

The three families having now reached the place of their future abode, it will be most convenient to follow their histories separately. Before we proceed to this, however, I desire to say something more of Elizabeth Stanley.

In the first volume of the town records of Hartford, page 21, is the entry:

"William Smeth was marryed to [Eliz] —— in August —— one thousand six hundred forty & fower."

The blanks in this entry are now nearly or quite illegible, but there is evidence that the original reading was "Elizabeth Standly," August "16." Who was she?

It is, I think, self-evident that she was a relative of the three brothers. None other of the name, a single female, can well be imagined to have come to that remote settlement at so early a date.

Either of three things is possible: that she was the widow of John Stanley, a second wife who survived him; that she was a niece of the brothers; or a younger sister. It is difficult to suppose the first from the entire silence of the records as to any such fact. We should have imagined that her husband would leave to her something of his estate, or that the court would make some provision for her in the order respecting the children; also that some allusion would be made to it in the record of her marriage to William Smith, etc., but there is nothing of the sort. As to the second supposition, I know of nothing to warrant it. On the whole, the third seems to have most support, that she was a younger sister, perhaps having an estate of her own, and therefore not dependent on them. What her age was at the time of her marriage is not stated, but it is evident that she was yet a young woman, and presumably the youngest of the family. Still, the absence of all data and even hints as to her relationship is not a little remarkable. If the early registrars had known how much trouble these omissions would cause unhappy explorers of old records in after generations, they certainly would have been more careful to supply them.

The account of her own family, as given by Savage, is as follows:

ELIZABETH STANLEY

married August 16, 1644, to William Smith, of Wethersfield Middletown, and Farmington, where he was "joined to the church" March 15, 1656-7. He was a brother of Christopher Smith of Northampton, made clerk of the military company the next year after his marriage. The births of his first six children are recorded at Middletown. She died, a widow, in 1678.

Their children were:

- 1 JONATHAN SMITH, b. Jan. 20, 1647; m. Mary Bird; died April 25, 1721.

SAMUEL SMITH,

youngest child of William and Elizabeth (Stanley) Smith, born in May, 1664, is said to have been a "weever." He lived in Farmington, (probably Kensington). He married March 24, 1687, Ruth, daughter of Thomas Porter and Sarah, daughter of Deacon Stephen Hart, and died January 6, 1725. After his death she married May 3, 1727, Joseph Root, senior, who died in 1739. Her brother, Thomas Porter, married Lois, daughter of Timothy Stanley, the second emigrant brother.

Their children were :

- 1 WILLIAM SMITH, b. Jan. 8, 1683.

JOHN STANLEY AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

JOHN STANLEY.

Born in England, the date not known. Embarked for New England in 1634-5, but died on his passage, leaving three children, with an estate in goods and money amounting to one hundred and sixteen pounds. His wife's name is not known.

His children were :

- 2 JOHN, b. 1624; m. Sarah Scott and Sarah Stoddard.
- 3 RUTH, b. 1629; m. Isaac More.
- 4 AN. INFANT, born and died 1634.

2

JOHN STANLEY.

(1 JOHN.)

Eldest son of the emigrant John, was born in England in 1624, and after his father's death was placed by the Court at Cambridge, in the care of his uncle Thomas Stanley, till the age of twenty-one. He removed with his uncle to Hartford in 1636, and doubtless lived with him till of age. During this period, when a mere boy of thirteen, he went in the expedition against the Pequots, the very year after the settlers came to Hartford.* He married, December 5, 1645, Sarah, daughter of Thomas and Anna Scott, of Hartford, and on the same day his sister Ruth, then but sixteen, married Isaac More, and the two young couples settled in Farmington. John Stanley and his wife were received to the church Jan. 30, 1652-3, and subsequently, when the families were graded

* So stated by his son in the "Stanley Manuscripts." See p. 37.

according to dignity, they ranked fourth in a list of forty families. He was one of the most distinguished of the colonists, being appointed by his townsmen to nearly every office of trust and honor. He was a deputy to the General Court almost continually for thirty-seven years, from 1659 to 1696, being, with few exceptions, the longest term of service known in the annals of the state. In King Philip's war he was a lieutenant and captain, from which he obtained the appellation by which he was most commonly known, of "Capt. John Stanley." Was constable in Farmington in 1654; sergeant in 1669; ensign in 1674; captain in 1676; received a grant of one hundred and twenty acres of land from the General Court in 1674, and another in 1687; was one of a committee on Indian troubles in 1689, etc. His wife died June 6, 1661, and he married 2d, April 20, 1663, Sarah Stodder (or Stoddard).* He died December 19, 1706, aged eighty-two, and his wife, May 15, 1713. His will is dated in 1705, and his inventory amounted to £360 7s. 1d.

His gravestone is seen in the ancient cemetery at Farmington. Some of the letters are indistinct; it is believed that the three middle ones should read DEC for December.

Their children were,

By his first wife:

- 5 JOHN, b. Nov. 4, 1647; m. Esther Newell.
- 6 THOMAS, b. Nov. 1, 1649; m. Anna Peck.
- 7 SARAH, b. Feb. 18, 1651-2; m. Joseph Gaylord.
- 8 TIMOTHY, b. May 17, 1654; m. Mary Strong.
- 9 ELIZABETH, b. April 1, 1657; d. an infant.
- 10 ISAAC, b. Sept. 22, 1660.

By his second wife:

- 11 ABIGAIL, b. July 25, 1669; m. John Hooker.
- 12 ELIZABETH, b. Nov. 28, 1672; m. John Wadsworth.

*Savage says she was Sarah, daughter of John Fletcher, of Milford; but Deacon John Stanley expressly says she was "Sarah Stodder." Stanley MSS. See p. 37.

As an illustration of the prominence of the three Stanley families in the early years of the Colony, the preceding table, prepared by Mr. Kellogg, from the printed Colonial Records, will be of interest. D stands for Deputy to the General Court, chosen for each semi-annual session; A for Assistant, chosen yearly in May.

RUTH STANLEY.

(1 JOHN.)

Second child of John Stanley, the eldest emigrant brother, was born in England about 1629, brought up in the family of her uncle Timothy, and at the age of sixteen married Isaac More or Moore, December 5, 1645. They early removed to Norwalk, Connecticut, where he was one of the first settlers; was a sergeant in 1649, and a representative from Norwalk to the General Court in 1657. He removed back to Farmington in 1660, where he was chosen deacon of the church. He and his wife were fifteenth in the grade of families there. After the death of his wife, May 26, 1696, he married, very late in life, Dorothy, daughter of Rev. Henry Smith, the widow of three previous husbands, the third of whom was Mark Sension (St. John), whose first wife was Elizabeth Stanley, her cousin, daughter of the emigrant, Timothy Stanley.

Their children were:

- 13 ELIZABETH MOORE, b. —, — ; m. Samuel Hayes.
- 14 RUTH MOORE, b. Jan. 5, 1657 ; m. John Norton.
- 15 SARAH MOORE, b. Feb. 12, 1662 ; m. William Lewis.
- 16 MARY MOORE, b. Sept. 15, 1664 ; m. John Hart.
- 17 PHEBE MOORE, b. April 25, 1669.

The name of Elizabeth is not recorded as a daughter of Isaac Moore, but it is believed there is equivalent evidence of the fact. It is highly improbable that his eldest child was not born till eleven years after his marriage. There is on record a deed of partition, dated January 9, 1738-9, between the heirs of Samuel Hayes of Norwalk, the heirs of John Norton, the heirs of William Lewis, and the heirs of John Hart, "all being grandchildren of Deacon Isaac Moore." Norwalk records show that Hayes' widow's name was Elizabeth; also that he had a daughter Sarah born September 19, 1673, whose mother therefore must have been born as early as 1653, or sooner.

There are further on the Court records at Hartford, entries as follows: "March 3, 1663-4. David Ensign, Pltff. contra Isaac More. In an action of the case for forfeiture of his bond, to the damage of one hundred pounds." "James Ensigne & Isack More having referred the issue of their differences to ye judgment & determination of the Court, the Magistrates having considered the case doe determine that Isack More shall pay unto David Ensigne the sume of fifteen pounds, seven pounds tenn to be pay'd betwixt this and the first of May, and seven pounds tenn to be pay'd within a moneth after Elizabeth More's marrriage, both payments to be made in currant countrey paye, and each person to beare their one charge in all former prosecutions, and all their papers to be burnt, and this to be a finall issue of these matters."

In Savage's Gen. Dict., II., 124, is found, "Ensign, James, Cambridge, 1634; rem. about 1639 to Hartford; son David, and 3 daus. Ensign, David, son of James, m. Oct. 22, 1663, Mehitable, dau. of Thos. Gunn, & had 5 ch. After his wife had been (for his ill conduct) divorced, she became 1685, second wife of Isaac Sheldon, of Northampton."

Mr. A. S. Kellogg, who furnishes these facts, adds: "I offer this theory. Isaac Moore married December, 1645, and had a daughter Elizabeth, born 1646 or 1647. When she was not over sixteen years of age, he contracted that she should marry David Ensign, giving bond for £100, the terms of which it is now impossible to discover. Finding David unworthy, he refused to give his daughter in marriage. David took another wife, and sued Isaac Moore, with result as above. Elizabeth, some years after, married Samuel Hayes. Apparently Isaac Moore had but four married daughters. If any son, he did not survive the father."

The above is offered not as ascertained fact, but as an hypothesis.

JOHN STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN.)

Eldest son of Captain John and Sarah (Scott) Stanley, born in Hartford, November 4, 1647, settled in Farmington, but removed with others about 1678 to the new settlement at Mattatuck (Waterbury), taking a hundred pound right, where he became one of the foremost citizens. "He was," says Bronson, "one of the assignees to whom the first Indian grant of lands was made over, and a grantee by name in the subsequent deeds. He was more than any other man, with the exception of Thomas Judd, senior, the ruling spirit and father of the settlement. He laid out the lots of the proprietors, staked out and apportioned the common fences, located highways, settled boundaries of adjoining towns, etc. He was the first Recorder of the town and of the proprietors. So far as appears, he was the only person among the earliest proprietors of Mattatuck who was fully qualified for the office. He wrote a legible and business-like hand."

He was a sergeant in the Waterbury train-band in April, 1682, and afterwards, so long as no higher officer was permitted. In October, 1689, when a lieutenant was allowed, he was first selected for that office. His appointment was confirmed by the Assembly; it was a distinguished honor, and no doubt he bore it worthily. After Waterbury began to send a representative to the General Court, Lieut. Stanley was the second whose name is recorded. What persuaded him to quit the settlement, in a time of great affliction, it is not possible to say. His loss must have been seriously felt. He returned to Farmington early in 1695, where he was a deacon in 1711, and afterwards. He, however, retained most of his lands in Waterbury, and his proprietor-right, and was a frequent visitor to the town to look after his estate. His familiarity with the records of the town was the cause of his appointment in 1705 to copy, for the purposes of preservation, such portions as were most important. He was appointed justice of the peace for Hartford County in May, 1704.

His dwelling-house in Waterbury was at the eastern end of the public square, near where the second Congregational church now stands. He married, Nov. 18, 1669, Esther, daughter of Thomas Newell of Farmington. In June 22, 1728, he made a settlement of his estate, by which the sons, Samuel, Nathaniel, John, and Timothy, took upon themselves the support of their father, mother, and their uncle Isaac. He died the next year, May 16, 1729. His widow died at the house of her son Nathaniel, in Farmington, Jan. 29, 1739-40.

Their children were:

- 18 ESTHER, b. Sept. 2, 1672; d. April 11, 1676.
- 19 JOHN, b. April 9, 1675; d. Aug. 12, 1676.

There are difficulties in relation to the entries of Sarah and Ruth which I know not how to solve. The former is said to have died about May, 1689, but the records of the First church in Hartford state that Sarah Stanley married Daniel Hooker about June 24, 1706. I know of no other Sarah at that time of the requisite age. In regard to Ruth, it is believed that Rev. Mr. Peck was "ordained" (i. e., installed) August 26, 1689. See Barber's Hist. Coll., page 266; Bronson's Hist. of Waterbury, page 206. That would bring her birth to about September 2, 1689, or six weeks after that of Timothy. How to reconcile these discrepancies does not at present appear.

THE STANLEY MANUSCRIPTS.

The late Deacon L. M. Norton, of Goshen, Conn., a distinguished genealogist and historian of that town, leaves the following record: "I have now in my possession sundry books and papers of MS. writing left by Mr. Nathaniel Stanley among the early settlers of this town, from which I have obtained much curious and valuable information. These consist chiefly of the following: The account-book of Nathaniel Stanley, about 6 x 15 inches, and containing nearly two hundred pages. It is bound in the old English style, in white parchment, and the accounts commenced in Farmington, June, 1725. This contains much besides accounts, family history and affairs, memorandums, etc., and has a regular index. Two folio books of writing paper, chiefly in the hand-writing of Deacon John Stanley, father of Nathaniel; the first containing thirty-two leaves or sixteen sheets sewed together. This contains a copy of several divisions of the land in Farmington, some grants and resolves of the General Assembly, with many things relating to the settlement of Mattatuck or Waterbury. The second is his book of accounts, etc., containing, besides, many other things. There are also two ancient pocket-books for writing, Deacon John Stanley's and Nathaniel Stanley's, both containing much matter also, and sundry other papers. From these books and papers I have collected most of the following information concerning this family."

DEACON STANLEY'S WINE ACCOUNT.

From the above memoranda, it appears that Mr. Stanley was chosen deacon in Farmington in 1711. He writes: "The first of my having care of the church stocks was in January, 1712." He kept a regular account of cash received and paid out. From the contributions for the supply of the communion table it is evident that the church was very large, judging by the quantity of wine used. It should be noticed that some small quantities were supplied to the sick poor in those days. Perhaps this may account for the large amounts which appear in the account.

THOMAS STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN.)

Second son of Captain John and Sarah (Scott) Stanley, was born in Farmington, November 1, 1649. He was one of the petitioners to the General Court for liberty to plant Waterbury, but did not remove thither. He married, May 1, 1690, Anna, daughter of Rev. Jeremiah and Joanna (Kitchell) Peck of Waterbury, and with his wife was received to the church in Farmington April 17, 1692. He died April 14, 1713, aged 63. His wife died May 23, 1718.

Their children were:

- 27 THOMAS, b. Oct. 31, 1696; m. Esther Cowles.
28 ANNA, b. May 14, 1699; m. Thomas Hart.

Rev. Jeremiah Peck was the son of Deacon William Peck, of New Haven, a graduate of Harvard, who married, November 12, 1656, Joanna, daughter of Robert Kitchell of Guilford, afterward of Newark, N. J. Mr. Peck taught school in Guilford 1656-60, then had charge of the Hopkins Grammar School at New Haven for a year or more, when he became minister of Saybrook. In 1665 he united with others who were dissatisfied with the union between the colonies of New Haven and Connecticut, and removed to Newark, N. J. In 1672 he and others purchased a tract of land of the Indians, in what is now Greenwich, Conn., where he preached till 1689-90, when he was called to be the pastor of Waterbury. He was then nearly seventy years of age and in poor health, but he continued to preach till his death, June 7, 1699, at the age of seventy-seven. He was a man of learning for the times. His will, made in 1696-7, very carefully divides his books among his children. The document is so curious for its contents and spelling that we give some parts of it.

"This wrighting made ye 14th day of January in ye year 1696 witnesseth yt I, Jeremiah Peck, Mr., of Waterbury in ye county of Hartford and colyni of Connecticutt in New England for good and lawful resins me moueing thereto have given & by these presents do give, grant, bequeath, besto vpon, alienate & pass over unto my well beloved children as followeth:

Other lands he gave to his sons Jeremiah and Joshua.

Mrs. Peck made her will also Oct. 7, 1706. It reads as follows:

Joseph Caryl's Exposition on Job was printed in London in 1676. It was a work in two immense closely printed folio volumes of about 4700 pages, now very scarce.—Kitto's Daily Bib. Ill. "Saul and David," p. 396.

TIMOTHY STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN.)

Fourth child of Captain John and Sarah (Scott) Stanley, was born in Farmington May 17, 1653-4, and with his father and brothers was among the first settlers in Waterbury. He was one of the first two townsmen that were appointed school committee, often moderator of the proprietors' meeting in 1706, grand juror in 1713, etc. In October, 1694, he was sent as deputy to the General Court, being the third person that received that honor. He held the same office in May, 1695, 1696, and 1699, May and October, 1708-10, and October, 1718. For a short time he was justice of the peace. In military rank he rose from sergeant in 1695 to ensign in 1696, and lieutenant and chief in command in 1703, which last office he held through a critical period till 1715.

Timothy Stanley called himself "cloth weur" (weaver) in 1716-7. His standing among his fellow citizens may be gathered from the responsible positions he occupied. His house was one of the fortified houses in the Indian war. In June, 1713, he deeded to his wife's nephew, Thomas Clark, his adopted son, one-half of his house and homestead, and other lands, divided or undivided, Clark agreeing "to take care of sd Stanley and his wife and carion all the work of the family or families wn (when) there shalbe need with ye help of sd Stanley and ye restof ye family, ye whole income of ye estate to be to ye use of both as they shall need," etc.

Timothy Stanley married in 1676 Mary, daughter of John Strong, of Windsor, and died childless Nov. 12, 1728. His wife died September 30, 1722. Thomas Clark was his executor and principal heir. The estate in Waterbury amounted to seven hundred and three pounds, and in Farmington to one hundred and eight pounds.

ISAAC STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN.)

Never married; was probably an imbecile. From Nathaniel Stanley's book it appears that he lived with his nephews Nathaniel and Timothy (two in one house), and was taken sick February 24, 1732, in Nathaniel's room. June 27, 1732, he was removed to Timothy's room, and into his care; afterwards removed again to Nathaniel's room. He died July 9, 1732.

ABIGAIL STANLEY.

Seventh child of Captain John and first of Sarah (Stoddard) Stanley, of Farmington, born July 25, 1669, married, November 24, 1687, to John Hooker, son of Rev. Samuel and Mary (Willett) Hooker, born February 20, 1665. She died February 21, 1743, aged seventy-five. He joined the church in 1688, she in 1697. For many years he was the leading man of the town, the "Gov. Treadwell" of the day. The town records in his handwriting exhibit great accuracy and finish. Though he had but a common education, he was one of the most prominent men of the colony, and eminent for his wisdom. He was the magistrate of the town, who did most of the business, and judge of the Superior Court from 1724 to 1732. He was chosen to the Town House of the assembly in 1699 and till 1723, when he entered the Upper House. He served twenty-one sessions, of which he was clerk of two sessions and speaker of six. He was nominated for assistant in 1709, and annually chosen for eleven years, from 1723 to 1733 inclusive. He was on important committees, and frequently sent to settle difficulties in towns, parishes, and churches, and personal difficulties, and to attend to important trusts. Papers on file in the office of Secretary of State exhibit his faithfulness, and the confidence placed in him. Four of his children married children of Captain John Hart.

Their children were :

- 39 HEZEKIAH HOOKER, b. Oct. 14, 1688 ; m. Abigail Cowles.

He was several times a member of Congress. His daughter Catharine married Gen. Nathaniel Terry March 14, 1798. Rose Terry Cooke, the authoress, and Gen. Alfred H. Terry were his grandchildren by two of his sons.

SAMUEL STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN.)

Third child of Deacon John and Esther (Newell) Stanley, born June 7, 1677, lived on the old homestead of his father in Waterbury, in whom the title remained after his removal back to Farmington. He was a carpenter and millwright; townsman in 1704 and 1705; collector of taxes, school committee, etc. His property was sold in July 9, 1714, for forty-five pounds, the deed being signed by both father and son. Soon after this he removed from the town, and subsequently lived in Wallingford, Farmington, and Durham. He married, July 15, 1702, Elizabeth, daughter of Abraham Bronson, of Lyme, and died in 1747. Samuel Stanley's father left this memorandum:

"Samull first dafter Elizabeth was born 8 March and died the last day of April 1714; his 2d dafter Elizabet was born 13 of March 1715."

NATHANIEL STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN.)

Fourth child of Deacon John and Esther (Newell) Stanley, was born September 25, 1679, at Farmington, and married Sarah, eldest daughter of Samuel and Sarah Smith, December 2, 1714. He lived in Farmington, now Avon, till the summer of 1742, when he removed to Goshen, Conn., where he died March 2, 1770, aged ninety-one. His wife was dismissed to the church in North Canaan in 1770, and afterwards returned to Goshen, and died March 16, 1772, aged eighty-two. She was born August 2, 1689. Both were professors of religion before they came to Goshen. Both are interred in the East street graveyard.

In 1741 he purchased of Joseph Hicock of Goshen, for the consideration of £1,055 — one fifty acre lot exclusive of one half-quarter of an acre, which I have granted to the town of Goshen for a burying place, with a mansion house and barn standing thereon, etc. This "mansion house" was merely a log cabin situate somewhere near where are the present buildings. The fifty acre lot is the same now (1843) owned and occupied by Adam Bentley, whose dwelling-house, built by William Stanley jr., in the summer of 1805, stands on the east side of East street, directly at the end of the road leading from Goshen meeting-house to East street.

He says, "We came to Goshen June the 8th, 1742." He followed to some extent the business of tanning. "Att the County Courte held at Hartford November 1, 1748, I obtained license for Tanning, by Lieut. Pettibone. Court fees £0. 10.
6. Money, old tenor, Nath^l Stanley."

He became a large landholder in Goshen, attending himself to his surveys, and owning, as set in the list at one time, 728½ acres. He was frequently called to fill various offices, selectman, etc., and continued a prosperous and useful inhabitant to his old age.

In regard to mental ability he was doubtless somewhat above mediocrity. His habit was to write much more than other men of his day. The books and papers left by him, and by his father, Deacon J. S., are at this time matters of great curiosity and interest, being highly illustrative of former men and things. He was a man of respected piety and of evangelical sentiments.

L. M. N.

Their children were :

- 67 SARAH, b. Nov. 21, 1715; m. Stephen Tuttle in 1735.
- 68 ESTHER, b. Oct. 2, 1717; m. John North.

22

JOHN STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN.)

Fifth child of Deacon John and Esther (Newell) Stanley, was born in Farmington, February 17, 1682, and married first, Hannah Porter, August, 1710, who died, and he married second, Mary Wright, of Wethersfield, December 9, 1714. He was accepted as a " bachelor proprietor" in Waterbury in 1715, but never resided there. He lived in Kensington; was one of the petitioners to the General Court in 1705 for a new parish in Great Swamp (Kensington), and when the new meeting-house in that place was "dignified," was awarded the "third pue." His contribution for the support of the minister, Rev. William Burnham, in 1720, was one bushel of wheat valued at 5s. 6d. Was chosen a school-committee in December 1, 1730.

An agreement for the settlement of his estate was filed in court February 9, 1749-50, signed by John Stanley, Thomas Stanley, Watts Hubbard, and Mary Hubbard, alias Stanley.

Their children were :

- 75 JOHN, b. about 1716; m. Sarah —.
- 76 THOMAS, b. June 20, 1726; m. Hannah Hart, and Martha —.
- 77 MARY, b. 1729; m. Watts Hubbard.

SETTING THE TUNE.

In connection with the name of John Stanley (or possibly of Nathaniel), we find at Hartford a curious record, which gives us a glimpse of the manner of conducting one part of public worship in those days. Whatever tunes were used in singing were known to the congregation only by memory, which would not always retain them with entire accuracy, besides which, every person felt at liberty to introduce variations of his own to suit himself; in a word, the singing was altogether ad libitum. The effect may be better imagined than described. Persons of some natural musical taste must have desired a change, and some measures were taken for improvement. Such an attempt seems to have been made in the church at Farmington, and it is to this that reference was made in the following record. The surname of the "one Stanley" mentioned is not given, and we are not sure whether it was John, Timothy, or his brother Nathaniel.

"To the Honourable ye General Assembly at hartford ye 18th of may 1725.

"the memorial of Joseph Hawly, one of ye house of Representatives humbly sheweth your Memorialist his father and Grandfather & ye whole Church & people of farmington have used to worship God by singing psalms to his praise In yt mode called ye Old way.

"however t'other Day Jonathan Smith & one Stanly Got a book and pretended to sing more regularly & so made Great disturbance in ye worship of God for ye people could not follow yt mode of Singing. at Length t'was moved to ye church whither to admit ye new way or no, who agreed to suspend it at least for a year.

"Yet Deacon hart ye chorister one Sabbath day In setting ye psalm attempted to sing Bella tune ; and yor memorialist being used to ye old way as aforesd did not know bellum tune from pax tune, & supposed ye deacon had aimed at Cambridge short tune & set it wrong ; whereupon yor petitioner raised his voice in ye sd short tune & ye people followed him except ye sd Smith & Standly & ye few who Sang allowd In bella tune ; & so there was an unhappy Discord in ye Singing as there has often bin since ye new Singers set up & ye Blame was al imputed to yor poor petitioner ; & Jno Hooker Esqr, assistant, sent for him & fined him ye 19th feb Last, for breach of Sabbath, and so yor poor petitioner is Layed under a very heavie Scandal & Reproch, & Renderd vile & prophane for what he did in ye feare of God & in ye mode he had bin well educated in & was then ye settled manner of singing by ye agreement of ye church.

"Now yor Petitionr thinks the Judgment is erroneous, first because ye fact, if as wicked as mr. hooker suppose Comes under ye head of disturbing Gods worship, & not ye statute of prophaning ye Sabbath; secondly, because no member of a Lawfull Church Society can be punished for worshipping God In modes & formes agreed upon & fixed by ye Society. thirdly because 't is errors when ye Civill authority Sodenly Interpose between partyes yt differ about modes of worship and force one party to submit to ye other, till all milder methods have bin used to Convince mens Consciences. fourthly, because 't is error to make a Gent of yor petitionr Carracter a Scandalous offender upon Record, for nothing but a present mistake at most, when no morral evil is Intended.

Wherefore yor poor petitionr prays you to set aside ye sd Jud. or by what means yor honrs please, to save yor poor petitionr from ye Imputation of ye hainous Crime Laid to him, & yor poor petitionr as In duty &c. shall ever pray.

JOSEPH HAULY.

The petition was granted in the Lower House, but rejected in the Upper. A committee of conference was appointed, but no report from them appears.

THOMAS STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN.)

Sixth child of Deacon John and Esther (Newell) Stanley, was born February, 1684, baptized May 25, 1684; married Deborah ——, and removed to Durham. He died about 1723. An agreement was made that year, May 17, between Deborah, probably the widow, and "the heirs," Samuel, Nathaniel, John, and Timothy, respecting the property of the deceased. His real estate at Durham was a house and barn, with one hundred twenty-seven acres of land, valued at £1,062. 10. 0.

To thrones celestial in their kindred skies."

His house was opposite the home of his father, in the north part of Stanley street, on the east side of the road, subsequently occupied by his son Oliver. He was elected deacon in 1795. 101
GAD STANLEY.^x

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS.)

Youngest son of Thomas and Esther (Cowles) Stanley, of Farmington, born March 21, 1735, lived on the site of his father's house, and by his father's will was to have a new house built for him from the estate in New Cambridge (now Bristol), on the land owned by him. It is believed, however, that he never resided there. He was a large farmer, and by his ability and address ultimately became one of the leading men of the town. He united with the church in 1768, and was, with one exception, the wealthiest member of the parish. On the tax-roll of the society for 1772, containing one hundred and twelve names, his list is set at £172. 05. 0., which is only five shillings less than that of Nathan Booth, whose list was £172. 10. 0.

Mr. Stanley early became interested in military affairs, and was made captain of the militia. He warmly espoused the cause of the colonies in their resistance to the oppressions of the mother country. We find the record of a town meeting of Farmington, held June 15, 1774, on the arrival of the news that the port of Boston had been closed by the British Parliament, when it was voted to assist in rendering help to that unfortunate city, and Gad Stanley, with others, was chosen a committee to take in subscriptions of wheat, corn, provisions, etc., for that purpose. In December of the same year the town voted their approval of the Articles of Association adopted by the Continental Congress, pledging the friends of the colonies not to purchase goods imported from England, and appointed Gad Stanley and Noah Stanley, and others, "a committee of inspection to transact all those matters that belong to them according to ye true sense and design of ye Congress in sd. Articles expressed." He was also one of a committee to prepare a general Plan of Agreement as to the manner in which these measures of non-intercourse should be carried into effect.

It was further voted that Gad Stanley and others should be a committee "to repair to New Cambridge and there to answer with Persons suspected to be unsound in their political sentiments, or such of them as shall see cause to attend on sd committee to reclaim in a peaceful way to a sense of duty as far as lies in their power." The object of this inquisition was to ascertain who were unfriendly to the cause of the colonies, and take measures to remove or silence them. It was a rigid proceeding, savoring little of liberality, but judged to be necessary at a time when the very existence of the liberties regarded as inalienable to every British subject, was threatened.

Next year, March 15, 1775, we find Gad Stanley chosen one of a committee "to give licenses for the use of Tea to such persons within their respective societies as shall appear to the whole to each society belonging that are here particularly named to be under absolutely necessity for the same," which means that though it was unpatriotic for the well and strong to drink tea, yet it might be necessary for the infirm and aged, in which cases, upon permission of the committee, it might be allowed without a compromise of principle or character. Various proceedings before this committee are recorded, trying persons for the unlicensed use of tea, laboring on Fast Day, and other offenses against what was deemed required by patriotism and morality in that critical condition of the colonies.

When the war actually broke out, Captain Stanley was prompt in resorting to arms. Just at that time two British vessels appeared off New London, and an express was sent into the country to convey the alarming intelligence. He arrived in New Britain on the Sabbath, just before the close of the afternoon service. As soon as the blessing was pronounced, Captain Stanley stepped forward, and with a loud voice gave notice to his company to appear on parade before the meeting-house door the next morning. The spirit thus manifested grieved the heart of the good clergyman, who, as a lover of law and order, had the sentiment of loyalty to his sovereign warm in his heart. "What," he exclaimed, "will you fight against your king?" "Yes," replied one of the sergeants, "and I would kill him as quick as I would a black snake, if I could catch him." The ill-timed expostulation of Doctor S. awakened no small resentment in the inflamed minds of the patriots, and but for the intervention of Colonel Lee, whose influence was great, it might have been serious for the clergyman.

Captain Stanley was present in the battle of Long Island, August 27, 1776. It was a disastrous day for the American troops, all of whom were raw recruits, while their enemy were the disciplined troops of England and Germany. Captain Stanley maintained his position as long as it was possible, and at last, when the retreat was ordered, succeeded, by a masterly maneuver, in leading off his regiment safely past the British forces. He was subsequently made a colonel, and ever after retained that title.

During this summer, his fifth child, a son, was born. The joyful news was reported to the absent father, with the request that he would say what his name should be. In due time the answer was sent :

"If he turn out a likely lad,
It might be well to call him Gad."

After the war, Colonel Stanley served in nearly every important office in the town. He was a representative from Farmington from 1778 to 1782; and from Berlin from 1785 to 1804, continuously. His name was associated with Colonel Lee and others in school and parish affairs, in securing the incorporation of Berlin as a distinct town, in attending to highways and the town expenses generally. He was chairman of the committee chosen to call and settle Rev. Newton Skinner, as a colleague of Doctor Smalley, and received him into his family for some months as a boarder. He was an active member of the church, though church-membership then did not imply all that it now does. It is stated, for instance, that under Doctor Smalley's ministry, only two laymen, Colonel Lee and Ensign Mather, were ever heard to pray in public. He was interested in the welfare of the schools, and the records show that his daughters, with those of Doctor Smalley, Deacon Noah Stanley, and others, were teachers in the district schools during the summers.

Gad Stanley married, October 29, 1767, Mary Judd, daughter of John and Mary (Burnham) Judd, granddaughter of Rev. William Burnham, of Kensington, a "lady well born and bred," descended from the Wolcotts and the Appletons, who were reputed to be of the bluest blood of the colonies. He died January 10, 1815, aged seventy-nine, and his wife, January 8, 1818, aged seventy. The inventory of his estate amounted to eight thousand dollars.

Their children were:

JOHN STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN, 21 NATHANIEL, 71 NATHANIEL.)

Youngest child of Nathaniel and Sarah (Baldwin) Stanley, born in Goshen, January 7, 1764; married Zeruah Partridge; settled in Canaan, Conn., as a merchant, and removed thence to Poultney, Vt., in the fall of 1791, accompanied by his father, mother, and three children. He brought his stock of goods with him, and opened his store in one part of his house, while he lived in the other. He subsequently built a store and a public house, but in 1808 failed, and gave up all his property. Doctor Dewey had invented a shearing machine, and Mr. Stanley commenced the manufacture of these machines, in which he was successful, paying all his old debts with interest. A common remark at the time was "John Stanley is an honest man." He was elected judge of the Probate Court in 1824, which office he held by repeated elections till 1829. Those who knew him have ever spoken of him as a model of integrity. In this respect he doubtless furnished in himself one of the best examples the town has had. He was devoted to the public interests; gave the land on which the first Methodist (stone) church was built, and superintended the building. He gave the ground for the old cemetery on Beamen street. He was always an attendant upon the M. E. church, and with his wife became a member some years before his death.

Their children were :

Theodore Sedgwick, of Massachusetts, and again, third, Miss — Miles, of New Haven, by whom he had a son Joseph, born in Marcellus, N. Y., where they then resided, and where William Goodwin died about 1813.

GEORGE GOODWIN, b. Aug. 12, 1842; died Jan. 26, 1858.

JOHN STANLEY GOODWIN, b. March 20, 1840; is now living in Erie, Pa.

LAURA GOODWIN,

Second child of William and Amy (Stanley) Goodwin, was for some time betrothed to Rev. Gordon Hall, one of the first missionaries to India. The engagement dated as far back as when he was a student at Williams College. After the completion of his studies, he received a call to settle as pastor in Woodbury, Conn., and another at Pittsfield, Mass., but declined them both to become a missionary. This, however, does not seem to have entered into the engagement first made with Miss Goodwin, and the question came anew before her for her decision, which, after long and painful consideration, was finally in the negative. Of the motives that led to it, her daughter, Miss Laura G. Sanford, thus writes :

"Miss Goodwin's position was a difficult and trying one. Her father was opposed, not only to missions, but also to Christianity, though on his dying bed, just before Mr. Hall left the country, and perhaps owing to his faithfulness, Mr. Goodwin gave evidence of a saving change. A constitutional timidity caused her to shrink from a conspicuous position, particularly one which required something of a teacher's gifts, in which she felt herself deficient. An ambition to succeed in all she might undertake, a desire to attempt nothing that she could not carry out creditably, and a refined taste that could not rest satisfied with anything in herself or others unless it reached a desired standard,—these matters, perhaps, were allowed to have too much influence in her decision."

Mr. Hall's own account of the matter, in a letter to a mutual friend, confirms this view, and also takes part of the responsibility to himself. "I have no doubt that Miss Goodwin would readily have consented to be the companion of my life among the heathen had she thought herself suitably qualified. My idea is that it was my duty to have said more to inspire her with just sentiments of those endowments which God had given her, and of her fitness, by the aid of divine grace, for such a station in life. . . . On this subject I said as much as I thought I ought to say, but I should have said much more had I then had the same views that I have since, and had I not feared the responsibility of attempting to introduce, by means of persuasion, a tender and beloved female to all the privations and trials and unforeseen events of a missionary attempt in some distant and unknown land."

Miss Goodwin was married, October 6, 1816, to Giles Sanford, at Aurelius, N. Y. Mr. Sanford was bred a merchant, and with his partner, R. S. Reed, was in business at Erie, Pa., for many years. They were the only merchants in the region during the war of 1812, Erie being then a naval station, and the depot for the upper lakes. They furnished the chief supplies for the building of the fleet with which Perry gained the great victory of Lake Erie, and in 1823 had a contract to supply Chicago with provisions, the white inhabitants of the place at that time being the one hundred men under Captain J. Green who garrisoned Fort Dearborn. Mr. Sanford was a gentleman of culture and taste, and though he did not become experimentally a religious man till after middle age, yet his integrity, disinterestedness, and benevolence, were always patent. But one person in his society, and that a man of great wealth, exceeded him in his benefactions. In the spiritual interests of the church he manifested, particularly in his latter days, the greatest interest. He died at Erie, February 13, 1866, aged eighty-two years.

"Mrs. Sanford's influence," writes another, "in the church, was most happy, and her influence upon her husband, and through him upon society, and her spirit still happy and active in a family of children well-trained, have been, and still are, a power for good, compensative of any loss the cause of missions may have sustained by her declining to enter the foreign field. She was emphatically a Home Missionary. She took up her residence in Erie when it was without churches, and its inhabitants, except a few, were very wild. She there aided in giving a Christian tone to society, and lived to see many churches, and an orderly population of tens of thousands." Part of her life work was the care of an invalid son, whom she survived but a few months. Her death occurred at Erie, September 20, 1854, aged sixty-seven.

The children of Giles and Laura (Goodwin) Sanford were :

1. LAVINIA STANLEY SANFORD, b. Sept. 1, 1817; m., May 16, 1837, to Col. Judah Colt Spencer, of Hadlyme, Ct., who has since 1863 been president of the First National Bank of Erie.

PHEBE STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD.)

Sixth child of Colonel Gad and Mary (Judd) Stanley, was born August 28, 1788, and married, September 18, 1800, Thomas, son of Zebulon Stow. Upon his marriage, Captain Stow built, and till his father's death occupied, a house in the southern part of the village of Cromwell; afterward removed to his father's house, where is now the Baptist church, where his children were born, and where he died. He first learned the trade of a house-painter, but never pursued it. He was a member of the firm of "Dewey & Stow," in Cromwell, Dewey having married his wife's sister, but his health failing him, he went to sea as a supercargo for his father, and ever after pursued a seafaring life. He made many voyages to the West Indies, England, Ireland, France, Spain, etc.;

suffered shipwreck several times; once nearly starved in his passage from England, in a calm. Was several years captain of the steamer "Oliver Ellsworth," on the Connecticut river, and master also of a towboat on the Hudson. He was captain of a vessel employed by the Government for the removal of the Seminole Indians from Florida. His last sea voyage was to Malaga, in 1839. After this he retired from active life, residing at home in Cromwell till his death, of bilious diarrhoea, August 14, 1845, aged sixty eight. He united with the Congregational church in Cromwell when about fifty years of age. In the latter part of his life he was a very devoted Christian. A full memoir of him, prepared by his daughter Jane, was published in the Sailor's Magazine, Vol. 3, 1857. He was a man of something over the medium stature, quick in his movements, very devoted to his family, and greatly esteemed by all his friends. He had not been successful in accumulating property, and left therefore but a small estate, consisting of his homestead and furniture, which he gave by will to his widow, and directed to be divided at her death between her two daughters, Jane and Anna. His widow, after his death, sold the estate, and lived alternately with her daughters, till her death, of spasmodic croup, September 27, 1857.

Their children were:

- 677 CAROLINE ROSETTA Stow, b. June 26, 1801; m., April 12, 1829, Dr. Jonathan R. Paddock, of Middletown, Ct., and died suddenly, Sept. 9, 1835, in Worthington, O. Their children were: 1. Jane Amelia, b. Jan. 25, 1830. 2. Thomas Stow, b. Feb. 25, 1833, an invalid. Jane Amelia Paddock married, Oct. 13, 1847, Elijah Conner Phister, of Maysville, Ky., a native of Maysville, graduated at Augusta College, Ky., 1840, entered the law in 1844; chosen mayor of Maysville in 1847-8; Circuit Judge in 1856-62; member of the legislature in 1867 and 1869; elected to Congress in 1878 and 1880. As a lawyer he stands in the front rank of the profession in the State. They have six children: 1. Caroline Stow Phister, died by lightning at seven. 2. Annie Phister, m. Chas. F. Griffin. 3. Mary Stanley Phister, m. Howell M. Finch. 4. Amy North Phister. 5. Thomas Roberts Phister. 6. Francis Richmond Phister.

689 JANE STANLEY STOW, b. Dec. 13, 1811; m., Aug. 25, 1841, Rev. Israel Perkins Warren (see No. 29). He is a native of Bethany, Ct., a graduate of Yale College in 1838, was settled as pastor successively in Granby, Hamden, and Plymouth, Ct.; in 1856 appointed secretary of the Am. Seamen's Friend Society, N. Y.; in 1859 appointed secretary of the Am. Tract Society at Boston, and editor of all its publications. In 1870 resigned, and made a tour with his wife in Europe; editor and publisher of books four years, in Boston; in 1875 became editor, and in 1877 proprietor, of the Christian Mirror in Portland, Me. His wife died of embolism of the leg, Feb. 26, 1881, at Portland. They had children: 1. Jane Leonora Warren, b. Nov. 18, 1844; d. Aug. 17, 1850. 2. Stanley Perkins Warren, b. MRS. JANE STANLEY WARREN inherited in an eminent degree the sterling qualities of her New England ancestry. She became interested in religion at about the age of fifteen, and united with the Congregational church in her native village in June, 1827. Her piety was characterized by active benevolence. Her care was to do good, live for others, her family, her friends, her associates in the church, and all who needed sympathy and help. In the various fields opened to her as a pastor's wife, in efforts for the poor and sick, in missionary circles and institutions of all sorts she was ever most active. She was one of the founders, and for many years the corresponding secretary, of the Union Maternal Association of Boston. During the war she was one of the foremost in that circle of ladies in the Mount Vernon church so distinguished for their efforts in behalf of our soldiers in the field and in hospitals. In anti-slavery and temperance work her heart was never weary. The cause of missions was especially dear to her.

Her mind was well stored with general literature, especially in the line of her husband's profession. Before her marriage she went through a systematic course of theological reading, transcribing, in her beautiful handwriting, two large quarto volumes of nearly twelve hundred pages, the entire lectures of the theological department of Yale College. During her husband's connection with the Tract Society she rendered him much valuable assistance with her pen, chiefly in the department of juvenile publications. One of her books, the history of the missionary vessel, the "Morning Star," passed through many editions.

She had all her life been subject to much bodily suffering. When a child she received a kick from a vicious horse, from which she lay many weeks near to death, and the mark of which upon her face she bore through all her life. Nervous disease and pain lavished upon her their multiplied woes. Her last and fatal illness resulted from an embolism or clot of blood in the artery of one limb, which had been much weakened by long eruptive disease. It was attended with severe and protracted suffering, but her Christian fortitude and patience never failed her. The last conscious hours were more than peaceful; they were full of hope and joy.

- 682 ELIZA STANLEY NORTH, b. Nov. 27, 1807; m. H. Stanley. (No. 1095.)

- 684 FREDERICK HENRY NORTH, b. Aug. 10, 1824; m. Mary Elizabeth North; grad. Yale College in 1846.

MRS. ELIZABETH STANLEY NORTH

S. J. North

Seth J. North was one of the founders of the manufacturing business of New Britain. His father, James North, was a blacksmith, yet a man of intelligence and enterprise. About 1793 he sent his son James, with two other young men, to Stockbridge, Mass., to learn the business of making brass. On their return to New Britain they set up the business there, commencing with the manufacture of sleigh-bells. Seth J., who had meanwhile learned blacksmithing with his father, joined his brother James, and after reaching the age of twenty-one, convinced of its profitableness, determined to carry it on by himself, James removing to Cherry Valley, N. Y. Receiving from his father a deed of the "Sugden place," as it was called, near the present residence of Miss Catherine Stanley, where the first sleigh-bells had been made, he took it for his dwelling-house, and built opposite to it more extensive shops than had before been used in New Britain. It is said that the capital on which this business was started was borrowed from Dr. Smalley.

In 1807 Mr. North, with four others, formed a company for making jewelry. This was not long continued. In 1812 Seth J. North, Alvin North, his brother, and H. J. Whipple, formed a partnership for a general plating business, drawing the silver plated copper wire, and converting it into clasps, and rings, curb-chains, and many similar articles. Various other branches of manufacturing were also incidentally carried on to some extent. Many hands were employed, and the village rapidly grew in enterprise and thrift.

Mr. North acquired what for the times was a large property, which, with his business talent, gave him extensive influence in public affairs. He was a colonel in the militia, and usually designated by his military title. He built a handsome house on the corner of Main and Park streets, where his son Frederick afterwards erected a more spacious mansion. He was a man of large public spirit, and among the foremost to foster whatever would tend to build up the place. His frequent reply to applications for aid in such enterprises, where his judgment approved of them, was, "Well, you know my rule; put me down for one-third; you must manage the rest." He was specially friendly to young men, and was ever ready to help them, if deserving, with counsel and loans of money. Says Dea. Andrews: "It will not be forgotten that Maj. Seth J. North was for nearly half a century the leading business man of the town. Having far-reaching and comprehensive views, while land was twenty-five dollars per acre, he secured a large tract in the village. Having superior executive power, he always conducted his operations to the most favorable result. Being ambitious to accumulate, a combination of circumstances seemed to conspire to gratify his desire. His tact and talent for business, his wealth, his public benefactions and private charities, have secured for him a reputation in this direction to which few attain."

He was no less interested in promoting the institutions of religion and morality than of business. He and his brothers, James, Alvin, and Henry, were what might be called pillars of the Congregational church for many years. All business arrangements were shaped to favor the moral and religious welfare of the place. Workmen were encouraged and expected to attend public worship, and the loose and demoralizing habits which too often characterize manufacturing towns were discouraged. The consequence was that religious institutions prospered in a remarkable degree. It was from the first made fashionable to go to church, and to keep the Sabbath, at least outwardly; and the impress thus put upon the place in the outset has been since retained, in great measure. In 1842 a portion of the Congregational church was set off to form a new church, and ever since both branches have been eminently prospered. They are now (1885) both of them larger than any others in the State, except one in New Haven, recently formed by a union of two. The South church, in whose organization Mr. North and his family were most active, built in 1867 a house of worship, of Portland freestone, costing about $135,000, which is surpassed by no edifice of the kind in Connecticut.

ANNA STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD.)

Eighth child of Colonel Gad and Mary (Judd) Stanley, born January 15, 1783, married, July 15, 1804, Alvin, son of James and Rhoda (Judd) North. She died June 26, 1815, aged thirty-two. He married second, May 1, 1816, Clarissa, daughter of Oliver Burnham, and died September 1, 1865, aged eighty-four. Mr. North first learned the trade of cabinet making, and it is related, as evidence of his activity in advanced age, that after he was seventy-nine years old, he made with his own hands a handsome bureau for his wife, and one for each of his children. He did not, however, continue in that business, but with his brothers James, Seth J., and Henry, was active in founding that varied manufacturing which in due time conduced so much to the growth and prosperity of the place. See a more detailed account of it under the name of Seth J., husband of Elizabeth Stanley (No. 283). He was not less eminent as a religious man, uniting with the church in 1809, and ever active in promoting its interests. He was a firm adherent of the old-fashioned orthodoxy, learned in his youth from the venerable Dr. Smalley, and jealous of any supposed departures from it in the church, or any that might minister to it. He was a true representative of the stanch Puritan character, honest, grave, and dignified in his whole demeanor.

His children were :

By first wife,

- 685 ORRIN STANLEY NORTH, b. July 13, 1805 ; m. S. Clark.

CYRUS STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD.)

Youngest child of Colonel Gad and Mary (Judd) Stanley, was born in New Britain, July 29, 1787, and inherited the home of his father in Stanley Quarter, where he carried on the coopering business, and afterwards that of brass-founder, but failed, and came to his wife's father's home in the village, where he died March 25, 1844, aged fifty-seven. He was an officer of the State troops in the war of 1812; a farmer and surveyor, of quick, active mind, vigorous body, and versatile genius. He married, September 7, 1806, Abigail, daughter of Isaac and Abigail (Goodrich) Lee, who died in Cleveland, O., at the residence of H. W. Clark, August 1, 1867, aged eighty.

Their children were:

- 688 DON ALONZO, b. June 24, 1807; d. Feb. 11, 1851; unm.
- 689 EMILY ROWENA, b. Sept. 11, 1810; m. Henry W. Clark.
- 690 CHARLES NORTON, b. Aug. 18, 1812; m. Eliza S. Moore.
- 691 HARRIET AURORA, b. March 25, 1815; unmarried.
- 692 ISAAC LEE, b. Dec. 29, 1817; unmarried.
- 693 GAD, b. April 17, 1821; m. Fanny Moore.
- 694 AMZI, b. Nov. 27, 1824; m. Esther Hughes.

The grandmother of Mrs. Abigail (Lee) Stanley was Tabitha, daughter of Isaac Norton, Esq., of Berlin, and the heroine of the poem, famous in its day, entitled "BRIDE-STEALING," written by the distinguished teacher, Mrs. Emma Willard. The poem was read on the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Farmington, in 1840. In the evening of that day there was an antique party, in the costumes of the olden times, during which this humorous story of an event well preserved in tradition was presented. It is said to be a true account of a veritable transaction, the persons named being the real actors therein. As Mrs. Willard herself was a daughter of the "Little Sammy" mentioned, and a large number of the company descendants of the other persons, the interest and amusement awakened by the recital may be imagined. The bridegroom and bride, as we have stated, were the grandparents of Mrs. Stanley, and though the poem is too long to be given in full, we will spare room for some leading portions of it.

BRIDE-STEALING.

A tale of New England's Middle Ages.

THE BRIDE.

Our heroine's name, we grieve to say,
Was unpoetic Tabitha ;
Yet 't is reported she was fair
As Ellens or Louisas are ;
With cheek as ruddy, eye as bright,
With form as fine, and step as light,

* GAD STANLEY.

Son of Cyrus Stanley, learned the druggist business of Lee & Butler of Hartford. He came back to New Britain, and was in the mercantile business for a few years, when he engaged in the manufacture of Rules, and other carpenters' tools. The members of the company were, Augustus Stanley, T. W. Stanley, Gad Stanley and T. A. Conklin, under the name of A. Stanley & Co. In 1854 the Stanley Rule and Level Co. was formed, which bought out their business, together with that of Hall & Knapp, manufacturers of spirit levels, try squares, and other carpenters' tools. The Stanley Rule and Level Co. are now the largest manufacturers of this class of goods in this country.

Mr. Gad Stanley was actively engaged in the management of the business until his death in 1858. Mr. Stanley was a man of quiet and retiring manners, good business capacity, strict integrity, and his loss in the prime of manhood, was greatly deplored by his numerous friends, by the South Congregational Church, of which he was an efficient member, and by the business community at large.

* Accidentally omitted from Index.

In full expectance too of fortune,
The daughter of rich Isaac Norton ;
And she could brew and wash and bake,
And weave and knit and mend and make,
The little or the great wheel twirl,—
And was, all said, “a working girl.”
No wonder, then, despite her name,
Suitors, or rather “sparks” there came.

THE BRIDEGROOM.

Grave and sedate, of twenty-three,
Of giant mold was Isaac Lee.
So slow his parts, 't is said that once,
In school, the master called him dunce.
But then, to pass the matter by,
For salvo, made this prophecy,—
“Like winter apple he 'd be found,
Slower to open, but more sound.”
His ancestors, true men of fame,
From Colchester, in England, came.

THE GUESTS.

'T is well remembered of that wedding,
Not one was slighted at the bidding ;
And on they came, in troops along,
A merry and a jocund throng.
First, decked as bridegroom grave should be,
And mounted well, rode Isaac Lee.
His father, Doctor Lee, with dame
On pillion snug, soon after came.
His uncle, Deacon Jonathan,
With Reverend Burnham, next rode on.
And thither hied in friendly part,
Norton's next neighbor, Ensign Hart,
Whose comely spouse was, when he took her,
The modest maiden, Mary Hooker.
They walked with firm and even mien,
Their little Sammy in between.
And of those Harts, the whole three brothers
That wived three Hookers, came with others ;
Thomas and John and Hezekiah,
Isaac and Nat. and Zechariah ;
And there came Demings, Cowles and Foote,
Beckleys and Buckleys, Norths and Roots,
Gilberts and Porters, sons and fathers,
Pecks, Smiths, and Booths, with Judds and Mathers,
The Lewis and the Andrews clan,
And all the STANLEYS to a man.

THE WEDDING.

Now all the wedding guests were met,
 And all in order due were set.
 Uprose the pair, uprose the priest ;
 They owned their union, and he blessed ;
 Then pious exhortation made,
 And long with solemn fervor prayed ;
 And when the knot full fast was tied,
 He led the way to kiss the bride.
 Then cake went round, and other matters,
 Handed on well-scoured pewter platters.

Next squeaked the tuning violin,
 Signal for dancing to begin ;
 And godly fathers thought no sin,
 When priest was by, and at a wedding,
 "Peggy and Molly" to be treading.
 Nay, priest himself, in cushion dance,
 At marriage feast would often prance.
 The pair, of course, led up the ball,
 But Isaac liked it not at all.
 Shuffle and cut he would not do,
 Just bent his form the time to show,
 As beaux and ladies all do now.
 And when the first eight-reel was o'er,
 Stood back to wall and danced no more.

His eye upon young Burnham* fell ;
 He watched him close, and read him well ;
 Among his set detected signs,
 Then warned his bride of their designs.
 "Beware," he whispered, "Burnham's gang ;
 Villain, he'll one day surely hang.
 They mean, my gentle love, to steal thee ;
 Be silent, nor let looks reveal thee ;
 Still keep by me, and fear no harm
 Beneath the shelter of this arm."
 She said, "I will obey, not must,
 Thy head, thy arm, thy heart I trust."
 Burnham approached ; "Should he have pleasure
 With the fair bride to tread a measure ?"
 "Sorry she was, but truth be spoken,

* A rival candidate for the bride's favor. He was the son of Rev. Mr. Burnham, the officiating minister, and had planned, in revenge for her preference of Isaac Lee, with the help of his associates, to carry her off in the midst of the festivities. It was one of the rude methods, then in vogue, of retaliating some slight, real or imagined, received from the parties.

The heel-tap from her shoe was broken ;
Yon ugly chink upon the floor
Had snapped it off an inch or more.”
With look displeased the youth withdrew,
Much doubting if she spoke him true.
To Mercy Hart away he posted,
Who came and thus the bride accosted :
“ O Tabby, come along with me ;
I ’ll show you something rare to see.”
“ Indeed, dear Mercy, I can’t go ;
My stay-lace ” — and she whisp’red low.
“ Well, then, Miss Lee, if you can’t come
And see your friends, we ’d best go home.”
In vain ; she could not tempt the bride
To quit like Eve her Adam’s side.

THE ASSAULT.

Now came the parting goodbys on.
Lee whispered few words, and was gone ;
And in a short five minutes more,
By movement quick she gained her door ;
Drew fast the bolt ; but straight pursue
With riot the confederate crew.
One mounted on fleet steed was near,
The bride, when stolen, off to bear.
Now at the door with shout and din,
They called aloud to let them in.
“ Quick, open, or the door we break ! ”
Down falls the door with crash and crack.
What saw those graceless felons then ?
A timid woman ? Ay, a man,
And more than man he seemed to be,
As armed with club stood ISAAC LEE.
Darted his eye indignant fire,
Thundered his voice with righteous ire.
“ Back, villains, back ! the man is dead
Who lifts a hand to touch that head.”
They stood aghast ; a moment gone,
Mad and inebriate, all rushed on.
“ Seize him,” cries Burnham, with a scoff,
“ While I take her and bear her off.”
Ere the word ended, down he fell ;
Lee’s giant blow had lighted well ;
And quick and oft those strokes descended ;
And when that battle fierce was ended,
Three men lay on the floor for dead,
And four more wounded turned and fled.

Dead they were not, but bruised full sore.
 The bride and bridegroom, bending o'er,
 With care and cordial life restore.
 Others came too ; the wounded raised,
 And Isaac's valor loudly praised.
 None thought him made of such true stuff,
 But hoped the rascals had enough.
 All said 't was right, and south and north
 Abjured BRIDE-STEALING from henceforth.

His neighbors Lee soon elevate
 In church, in army, and in state,
 And make him, spite of his desire,
 Colonel and deacon and esquire !
 And in the last it well appears
 He judged New Britain thirty years.
 When wearied out with public duty,
 His Tabby still to him a beauty,
 He to all rulers a bright beacon,
 Would office quit save that of deacon.
 His townsmen would not hear his plea,
 But he perforce their judge must be.
 Lee well resolved his cares to doff,
 Straight penned request to let him off
 To General Court at Hartford sitting,
 Who judged it hard and ill befitting
 To force a man, whate'er his skill,
 Office to hold against his will.

And so his acts as magistrate
 Spread all through this part of the state ;
 Of his wise judgments you might hear
 In Christian Lane and Fagonshire,
 In Woman's Misery, if you ask it,
 Or Sodom, where the Wyers made basket ;
 And not a man that you should meet
 In Cider brook, or Brandy street,
 Or Pumpkin town, or Pudding hill,
 Or Lovely town, or where you will,
 But knew the fame of Colonel Lee ;
 Nay ; some so zealous friends had he,
 Through the Green woods his acts they ringed 'em
 To Pilfershire and Satan's kingdom.

JOHN GRAY STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN, 20 SAMUEL, 56 SAMUEL, 117 AMOS.)

Fourth child of Amos and Zeviah (Gray) Stanley, was born in Lenox, Mass., September 30, 1778, and married January 27, 1803, Orrilla Brewster, of Becket, a lineal descendant from Elder William Brewster, of the Mayflower. He possessed an ardent temperament, was studious, amiable, and hopeful. The growing infirmities of his parents induced him to forego his desire for a public education to care for them, but his thirst for intellectual improvement remained. His natural taste for mechanical operations led him to various occupations, in which, as is usual in such cases, he was not financially successful. His first razor was forged from an old file upon a cobble stone from the brook; his first flute was of his own workmanship; his first stringed instrument was a violoncello dug out of a plank. In after life he could probably work more metals than Tubal-Cain ever experimented on. At length he engaged in bookbinding, to which was added the building of ruling and paper-cutting machines, with almost always some farming operations. Among other things he was at different times the publisher of two political newspapers. His active energies were overtired by all these things, and he broke down in health, and died early, October 25, 1835.

He was equally active in religious and moral enterprises; in the first organization of the Sunday-school, of which he was many years the superintendent, and in the formation of Bible, Tract, Missionary, Temperance, Anti-slavery, and other kindred organizations. His house, though not large, was the place where village prayer-meetings were held, where the friends of missions and missionaries, outgoing and returning, met, where boxes and barrels were packed, etc. He was always interested in revivals of religion, a man to whom the anxious inquirer could go with his burdens and trials, sure of sympathy, and trusting in the counsels he would give.

At one time he gave attention to the study of medicine, which often rendered him useful in the sick room. His wife was in the most perfect accord with him in all these efforts, and not a few of her warmest friends were devoted female missionaries in different fields of labor. She died September 21, 1860, aged seventy-eight.

"I was," he writes, "in very early life engaged in farming with my father, but at nineteen went west of Lake Erie into the new country, where I continued the same occupation for a time. In 1840 I entered the ministry, in the Methodist connection, itinerating for some eight years, when, by failure of health, etc., I located, and engaged in the study and practice of medicine. I followed its practice in this western prairie country until my health required a change, when I engaged in real estate business, in which I continued six years. Now for the last four I have suffered from a paralysis of the lower extremities, and have not been able to do any business; at times almost helpless. I am now a little over seventy-four. Of my father's family of fourteen children, only myself and my sister Zila (Mrs. Vickery), remain." He was Recorder of Plymouth County, Iowa, from 1878 to 1882, and now resides at Pipestone City, Minn.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 5 JOHN, 25 TIMOTHY, 88 TIMOTHY, 236 THADDEUS.)

Fourth child of Thaddeus and Betsey (Dowd) Stanley, born in Litchfield, Conn., June 1, 1798, lives in Wyoming, N. Y. His boyhood was spent in East Bloomfield, N. Y.; learned the harness-making business, and carried it on somewhat extensively in Rochester. In 1836 he was general agent in a milling establishment of ten run of stones, his principal business being to keep up a supply of wheat, and superintend the building of another mill that cost $33,000. One of the partners died, and the mill went into other hands. After serving as assistant Canal Superintendent for two years, he moved to the town of Ogden, twelve miles west of Rochester, where he was elected elder in the Presbyterian church. In 1843 he moved to Hillsdale, Mich., which had been made the county seat a year and a half before, and where was a small church of eleven male members, he being the oldest. He was chosen elder there. It being the county seat, containing many professional men, much infidelity prevailed among them. They tried to break down the little church, but it stood firm. There were some choice spirits in the church, and the Lord carried them triumphantly through. When he left there in 1847, it was hardly out of its swaddling clothes, but is now a strong and efficient church. His health failed him, and in 1847 he came back to Bemington, where his wife's father was pastor of the church. He was elected elder there, and served as such till his removal to Wyoming, in 1860. He has been an active business man all his life; has had heavy contracts on the Ohio canal, and made some railroad; has taken out two patents, one for bringing the wire cable into common truss bridging, the other a railroad improvement. With two exceptions he has voted at every presidential election since 1820; has always been a party man, but not an office seeker, so that politically he has never been higher than town clerk and street commissioner. He has been a conscientious abstainer from intoxicating drinks for more than fifty years. "I am now," he writes, "a superannuated deacon; at the age of eighty-six really enjoying the quiet evening of this long, laborious, uneventful life, and hopefully waiting for the great event of my existence, the change of worlds, passing from time into eternity, which I know must be in the course of nature."

He married first Sarah Lake, and second, December 14, 1836, at Rochester, Eliza Chichester, daughter of Rev. Isaac and Eunice (Wakelee) Chichester, of Scipio, N. Y.

Son of Lot and Rhoda (Wadsworth) Stanley, born October 12, 1773; was a farmer in New Britain, in Hart Quarter,

MRS. URSULA STANLEY JUDD.

* MORTON JUDD.

Son of Ursula Stanley Judd, born November 5, 1808; to Church April 4, 1841; elected Deacon, October 23, 1851. Married first, Lucina Dunham of Southington, Conn., January 26, 1828, she died March 21, 1853, age 42; he married second, Julia Blinn of Wethersfield, Conn., February 21, 1855, she died November 19, 1887, age 70.

His children by first wife are:

HUBERT LEWELLIN, b. April 1, 1829.

ALBERT DUNHAM, b. December 4, 1830.

EDWARD MORTON, b. November 11, 1837.

MARTHA LOUIZA, b. July 9, 1846.

Second wife's child:

MARY BURNHAM, b. April 8, 1857.

Mr. Judd has from the time of his marriage in 1828, until now, 1888, been engaged in the manufacture of hardware. First in Southington three years, then for thirty-three years in New Britain with his brother † Oliver S., to whom, in 1864, he sold his interest and removed to New Haven, where in 1868 he, with his three sons, organized a joint stock company, under the firm name of The Judd Mfg. Co., and located on Howard street, occupying factories owned by C. S. Bushnell, who was also a stockholder.

In 1877 the interest of Mr. B. was purchased, and the business removed to Wallingford, Conn., where extensive factories, including iron and brass foundries were built, and where the business is now (1888) still carried on, with Morton Judd in his eightieth year acting as President; with mind as clear, body erect and active as at forty. His unusual vitality and activity are inherited from his mother. A woman of rare energy and decision of character, tall, erect, and of fine physique, well adapted to the time and place in which she lived, where during her early life it was no unusual occurrence for several straggling Indians to appear suddenly at her door to demand food, or whatever else might suit their fancy. She died in 1858, age 83.

He has been not only diligent in business, conducting it with strict integrity, but has united with it, christian philanthropy. These qualities added to naturally cheerful and social nature have endeared him not only to his family, but to all who have made his acquaintance: and he is now enjoying the fruits of it, surrounded by his children, all of whom are living and owning pleasant homes on one of the finest streets in Connecticut.

Lot Stanley, the father of Amon, was one of the first manufacturers of fur hats in Connecticut. When his son Amon came of age, the business was carried on by them jointly, and after the death of the father, by Amon alone. He employed several hands, and every winter made one or more journeys to what was then "the West," embracing Central and Western New York. He was accustomed to take with him a load of hats, which he exchanged for beaver, and other furs that were then plentiful in all that region. There was also something of a home market, but as the bodies of the hats were made of beaver fur well felted together, they lasted a lifetime. It needed, therefore, a large territory to make a sufficient market for the goods. An old-fashioned bell-crowned hat would astonish the boys of the present generation.

Mr. Stanley bought out his father's homestead and farm from the other heirs, and there being fourteen of the children, his own portion was so small that it was nearly the same as buying a new farm. The price he paid for it was high. For one piece of twelve acres, which he bought of his brother Lot, he paid twelve hundred dollars. At the present time it would not bring five hundred. He also carried on the business of distilling cider-brandy, having large orchards of apples which were worth little for any other purpose. The business was then considered perfectly respectable. His wife, however, a sister of the brothers James, Seth, Alvin, and Henry North, had many scruples about its being right. At length she went to her minister, Rev. Newton Skinner, one of the most godly men of his time, for advice. "Why madam," said he, "it is a lawful calling." He, like many of that day, was also a farmer, and brought his cider to the distillery to exchange for brandy, which he furnished to his men in haying time. But Mrs. Stanley was not satisfied; the matter still agitated her conscience. At length her husband came to the conclusion that she was right, and sold the distillery, and there was great joy in the family. But his peace was of short continuance. He had never allowed any idlers about the place, selling the liquor only at wholesale to the merchants in Hartford and New York, while the new-comers were drinking men, and the distillery became the resort of all the low characters in the neighborhood. The consciences of the family were disturbed again, and they all came to the conclusion to buy back the property. The owner was willing to sell at an advance on the price he gave for it, making it a condition, however, that Mr. Stanley should exchange for it in part a valuable piece of woodland, which was as the apple of his eye, as all woodland was to the farmers of those days. The hard condition was accepted, and the distillery was his own again. The concern was at once broken up. The great cider-tubs were sold for water-cisterns; the copper-stills loaded on the ox-carts, and all the cattle and steers of the farm drew it in triumph to the brass factory of North & Stanley in the village. The boys who were at home assisted in driving the team, and on reaching the factory waited till the stills were cut up, preparatory to being cast into sleigh-bells, and other useful articles. It was a triumph of principle over both education and interest, worthy to be recorded on a monument "more lasting than brass."

Eighth child of Lot and Rhoda (Wadsworth) Stanley, was born in New Britain December 31, 1786, and married Ansel, son of Luther and Sarah (Goodrich) Stocking, of Kensington, Conn. His daughter, Mrs. Eliza Wetmore, writes: "My father moved in 1819 to what was then called the Black River country. We lived in Collinsville eight years, father working at his trade, which was that of a blacksmith, near the high falls in the Black river. He then bought a farm nearer the falls, and followed farming. The country was new, and there were plenty of stumps, deer, bears, and wolves, and log houses. On the east side of the river was an unbroken wilderness through to Vermont. The Oneida Indians used to come there every winter to hunt deer and other game. I had never seen an Indian before, and was afraid of them when they would come into the house with their black babies tied on a board, and set them up against the wall. We lived on the farm until after mother's death, November 13, 1852, when my father sold, and moved into Madison County. He died there April 8, 1872, and was buried in Lewis County by the side of my mother."

One who knew Mr. Stanley well, having been one of his pupils, says: "Mr. Stanley was a teacher by nature. His circumstances in life did not necessitate his engaging in this work, but he did it from a pure love of it. He was especially fond of the mathematics, and those who had a similar taste for them made rapid advances therein. He was rigid, and at the same time not a harsh disciplinarian; 'The one thing,' he used to say, 'which I must and will have in school, is ORDER.' At the same time he was genial in his manners, and out of school entered heartily into sports and plays with his pupils, but the moment school began, and the pupils were within the door of the room, he was master again. He was always popular with both pupils and parents, and one of the most successful teachers that the town ever had."

TIMOTHY ROBBINS-STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 99 TIMOTHY, 269 TIMOTHY.)

Sixth child of Timothy and Abigail (Robbins) Stanley, was born in Hartford May 14, 1810, and emigrated with his parents to Marietta, O., in 1815. He represented Lawrence County in the Ohio Legislature in 1846, and was a member of the Ohio Senate in 1860-1. He was a leading member of the company that built the Eagle furnace.

Upon the close of the session, in the spring of the latter year, he began and completed the enlistment of the 18th Infantry Ohio Volunteers, of which he was chosen colonel. His first active service was with General O. M. Mitchell, in his campaign from Nashville, which resulted in the seizure of the Memphis and Charleston Railway, and the occupation of that line by Buell's forces during the summer of 1864. Stanley commanded a brigade at the battle of Stone River, soon after which he was breveted brigadier-general. His command participated in the campaigns that closed in November, 1863, by the permanent occupation of Chattanooga. About this time he was chosen to the honorable and responsible position of commander of the post, which he held till mustered out in 1865.

When the war was over he established the law firm of Stanley, Henderson & Wheeler, and later in the same year, he, with others, founded the First National Bank, of which he remained vice-president till his death. Through two sons, George and Henry, he made considerable investments in California, and was a large owner of property in Chattanooga and vicinity.

He married, in 1832, Prudence Welles, who died in 1869, by whom he had six children. He married, second, Maria P. Hollister, of Glastonbury, Conn., who survived him. Four sons reached maturity, of whom two were ministers of the gospel. In February, 1869, General Stanley was stricken with paralysis, from which he never entirely recovered. He died in Chattanooga July 8, 1874, aged sixty-four years.

Their children were:

- 1279 TIMOTHY WELLES, b. 1833 ; m. Jennie Kirk.
- 1280 LEONARD W., b. 1836 ; died 1839.
- 1281 JULIA P., b. 1838 ; m. Edgar W. Steele.
- 1282 HENRY YOUNG, b. 1842 ; m. H. A. Ent. Two children.
- 1283 GEORGE ROBBINS, b. 1845.
- 1284 CHARLES EDWARD, b. 1848.

"In mind and morals," says his biographer, "as in person, General Stanley was superior to most of his race. During the war no soldier was turned away by his sternness, and no superior officer but heard his opinions with respect. His sense of duty was the ruling impulse of his treatment, and those in low degree were protected by it, and those in high degree were forced to respect it. The Methodist church, of which he was many years a member, was cherished by him; especially in this city (Chattanooga) has he been regarded as a leader and chief reliance by both pastor and people. More stars on his shoulder would not have oppressed his strong shoulders, nor been unworthily borne. He has served his generation well, and the honors he reaped here were less his care than the glory of the hereafter. If the stars on his shoulder were too few, those which shall shine forever in his heavenly crown may be numberless." — Compiled from Chattanooga Papers of July, 1874.

ried, January 21, 1824, Charlotte, daughter of Seth J. and Elizabeth (Stanley) North; was received to the church January 24, 1829. He built a house in Stanley Quarter, on the site of the homestead of Colonel Gad Stanley, afterward removed into the village, and built where Rev. Mr. Rockwell, who married his widow, has since resided. "He was a man of few words, and of sterling integrity, of courtly bearing, and liberal views."—(A. A.) He died February 19, 1839, aged forty.

Mrs. Charlotte (North) Stanley married second, July 29, 1844, Rev. Samuel Rockwell, pastor of the South church in New Britain. He was a native of Winchester, born April 18, 1803, son of Alpha and Rhoda (Ensign) Rockwell; graduated at Yale College in 1825, ordained and installed pastor of the church in Plainfield, Conn., April 11, 1832; dismissed in April, 1841; installed pastor of the recently organized South church in New Britain, January 4, 1843, where he fulfilled a successful and highly honored ministry of fifteen years, resigning in 1858. He was then honored with many appointments of usefulness in that borough and city; chosen representative in the Legislature in 1862 and 1869, and senator in 1865; appointed Judge of Probate July 4, 1864; treasurer of the New Britain Savings Bank from its incorporation in 1862, etc. He had been twice married previously, first, June 6, 1833, to Julia Ann Plummer, of Glastonbury, who died April, 1838; second, May 5, 1840, to Elizabeth Eaton, of Plainfield.

Mr. Rockwell was a man of devout piety, a sound and impressive preacher, a good theologian and scholar. The church under his ministry had a rapid growth, and ultimately became, with possibly one exception, the largest in the state. Mrs. Charlotte N. Rockwell, his third wife, still survives (1885), though in very delicate health, honored and beloved by all.

Rev. Mr. Rockwell's children were: by first wife, George Plummer Rockwell, born May 9, 1834, at Plainfield; married, June 18, 1857, Eliza S. Ames. By second wife, Elizabeth Eaton, born April 9, 1843; died March 11, 1866.

ALMIRA STANLEY COE

Was a woman of rare strength of mind and character. The early promise she gave was in manifold ways fully realized, as she developed into young womanhood and mature life.

Her school life in the old "Academy" of her native town of New Britain, Conn., at Rev. Joseph Emerson's at Wethersfield, Conn., at Westfield, Mass., under Rev. Emerson Davis, and afterward at Mrs. Emma Willard's well known Seminary at Troy, New York, was one triumphant progress in every branch of study she chose to undertake. Then followed a year and a half of life in Savannah, Ga., in the family of A. A. Smets, as instructor of his children, and where she had ample opportunity of adding extensive and miscellaneous reading to the attainments of earlier years in school.

Her marriage with George S. Coe of New York, occurred in 1842, which, after a short residence in Cincinnati, Ohio, made her permanent home in Brooklyn, Long Island, till the summer of 1866, and afterward in Englewood on the Hudson, till her death in January of 1883.

The conscientious study and reading of her earlier years had deepened in her more than ordinarily thoughtful and serious views of life. And the keen desire for mental acquisition which she showed in youth was always her characteristic, and every opportunity of gratifying this desire by reading and travel was always eagerly embraced.

Her life after her marriage was outwardly not an eventful one, but was filled to overflowing with rich mental experiences, and adorned with the graces of a large and kind hearted hospitality, an intelligent and ever ready benevolence, and constant and unfailing charity to all with whom she came in contact. A life truly lived for others, in which self was utterly forgotten, as they who loved best know her. It would not be easy to number those who tell now of her tender friendship, or those who have sought and found encouragement in trouble and weariness of spirit. Her simple habits and retiring manners confined the intimate knowledge of her life and character to comparatively few of the larger circle of acquaintance which her circumstances commanded—but those few, and the greater number who knew by actual experience of her charity and readiness to aid, all "rise up to call her blessed."

ALMIRA STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 99 TIMOTHY, 271 JESSE.)

Eldest daughter of Jesse and Lucy (White) Stanley, born March 20, 1818; married, June 15, 1843, George Simmons Coe, son of Adam Simmons and Ann (Pease) Coe, of Newport, R. I., born March 27, 1817. Mr. Coe is a distinguished banker and financier in New York, president of the American Exchange Bank. Mrs. Coe died January 3, 1884.

Their children are:

- 1302 LUCY ANNA COE, b. Aug. 22, 1844; d. Oct. 10, 1847.
- 1303 GEORGE STANLEY COE, b. Jan. 1, 1849; d. Sept. 19, 1849.
- 1304 EDWARD PRIME COE, b. Feb. 2, 1851; m. Oct. 11, 1877, Margaret Duryee.
- 1305 ALICE STANLEY COE, b. Nov. 17, 1853; m., Oct. 1, 1878, Richard Malcom Montgomery.
- 1306 ELIZABETH BLAKE COE, b. Dec. 22, 1855; d. Aug. 20, 1864.

To Mr. Coe belongs the distinguished honor of having been a chief instrument in procuring from the banks of New York the first national loan in 1861. The circumstances are thus described in the Englewood (N. J.) Standard.

"Secretary Chase, with the dignity which belonged to his noble presence, gave the conference [of bankers] a very lucid, frank and masterly exposition of the crisis in its National aspects, and the pressing need of the Government for money, explaining the act of Congress authorizing the loan. The wise old heads listened, bowed in thought and grave apprehension. Naturally timid, as are men of experience intrusted with weighty responsibilities, and naturally conservative, even to an excess of caution under new and untried circumstances, they shrank, as was not unnatural, from the assumption of powers which, from the standpoint of average human foresight, might involve their institutions in bankruptcy. At least the situation was novel—the present clouded with doubt, and the future unillumined by any light from the past. The weighty words of the Secretary brooded over their spirits, and they sat in a silence at first awkward and then appalling, until a heavy gloom seemed to settle down and paralyze the entire assembly. At that moment sprang up the youthful-looking and animated figure of Mr. Coe, his cheering and ringing tones at once arresting attention, and lifting the bowed heads of his fellow bankers. ‘I move,’ said he, ‘that we take this loan. It is not merely the dictate of patriotism, high as is this impulse. It is not merely that of wisdom, which is sometimes greater than prudence and caution. It is simply a commanding necessity — the instinct of self-preservation — which exacts it. In the question of the existence of our Government is involved our own. Without a Government banks cannot exist, property is without value. Existence itself is undesirable. Let the hordes of the Confederacy enter Washington, and establish a slave confederation, and New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, become again mere trading ports, insignificant villages. Let this free Government go down, and (taking out from his pockets a few cents) I would not give these coppers for all your banks, your bank buildings and bank capital. I would not give a five-cent piece for the American Exchange Bank with its $5,000,000 of capital. Gentlemen, you must take this loan. Either take the loan or barbarism.’

“All heads were raised in sympathetic admiration. All eyes sparkled with the ardor and glow of the suddenly inspired orator. The loan was unanimously voted, and the Government supplied with the means to begin the war for the Union. All honor, then, I say, to George S. Coe. If no monument in bronze or marble in any of our cities commemorates his patriotic services, let history at least keep the record, and cherish the name of the man whose promptness and courage, in the hour when men’s hearts were failing them, did so much to restore confidence and to save the country.”

Was transferred to Veteran Reserve Corps at Boston, where he did provost and court marshal duties for about $1\frac{1}{2}$ years. Was afterwards on Gen. Doubleday's staff as post commissary, on David's Island. Was mustered out in 1866.

Mr. Seymour married a second wife, Grace Comstock, daughter of Capt. H. T. Comstock, at Terrace Hill, Hadlyme, Conn., May 17, 1882.

J. T. Hawley

Hon. David N. Camp, of New Britain, writes of Mr. Stanley: "Frederick T. Stanley was the son of Gad Stanley, and a grandson of Col. Gad Stanley, an officer in the revolutionary army, and a civil magistrate of note. He passed his childhood on the farm in Stanley Quarter, attending school near his home a part of his time. At sixteen years of age he went into a store in New Haven as clerk, and remained there until 1823, when he removed to Fayetteville, N. C. At this place he was engaged in the mercantile business for three years, and then sold out and returned to the North.

"For a year or two he was a clerk on a steamboat, making trips from Hartford to New York, under the command of Capt. Thomas Stow, the husband of his aunt Phebe (Stanley) Stow. After returning to New Britain, he was for a short time clerk in the store of O. H. Burnham, and in 1829 was engaged in mercantile trade with Curtiss L. Whaples. In 1830 he was associated with his brother, William B. Stanley, H. W. Clark, and Lora Waters, in a small manufactory on Main street, near the present railway crossing. He bought out his partners in 1831, and commenced the manufacture of locks, the first made in this country. He introduced the first steam engine used for manufacturing purposes in New Britain. In 1835 he became a partner in the firm of Stanley, Woodruff & Co., and entered more extensively upon the manufacture of locks of various kinds.

"In 1841 he sold out his interest in the latter company, and for the next two years was in business in the State of Mississippi. Upon his return to New Britain he engaged in the manufacture of bolts and hinges in a shop near his house. The business increased rapidly, and in 1852 a joint stock company was formed, of which he became president. He continued in this office until his death, a period of more than thirty years.

"In business Mr. Stanley was methodical, energetic and progressive, but he never made the acquisition of property his sole aim. His generous nature led him to give liberally, both of time and means, for the benefit of others. His public spirit especially led him to place the welfare of the town and city before his private interests. He planned the city water-works, and by unceasing energy and indomitable perseverance secured the adoption of his plans and the introduction of Shuttle-meadow water into the city.

"He was one of the prominent movers in securing the town park, and having it set apart for public uses. He was active in promoting the various railway enterprises which have so much benefited New Britain, and the first engine run on the Berlin branch bore his name. He earnestly advocated the system of sewerage finally adopted for the city, and was personally active in making preliminary arrangements for its use.

"He represented the town of Berlin in the legislature in 1834, was in 1850 elected the first warden of the borough of New Britain, and in 1871 the first mayor of the city. He was intrusted with the affairs of the county, and though never an active politician was well informed on all national questions. An ardent admirer of Daniel Webster, he often traveled long distances to hear him speak.

"Mr. Stanley was a consistent member of the South church, attending its services after his eyesight had entirely failed, and his steps had to be guided by another."

DON ALONZO STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD, 286 CYRUS.)

Eldest child of Cyrus and Abigail (Lee) Stanley, born June 24, 1807, was a deaf mute; educated at the Asylum in Hartford, under Rev. T. H. Gallaudet. He was a tailor by trade, and died from an injury caused by a railroad engine, February 11, 1851. He never married. His inventory, dated March 29, 1851, was real estate, $1,600.

His deafness was caused by disease when about one year old. After reaching the age of seven or eight, his father consulted with Dr. Mason F. Coggeswell, of Hartford, who also had two deaf and dumb daughters, and with other benevolent gentlemen, as to what could be done for the benefit of these and similar unfortunates. As the result, Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet went to Paris, May 10, 1815, to learn the method of teaching deaf mutes. He returned in August, 1816, with Monsieur Laurent Clerc, an accomplished scholar, and the first school for this class in America was opened by them in Hartford, April, 1817, and has been followed by many similar schools in various parts of the country. Alonzo Stanley was one of the first pupils of the school, and attained good proficiency in its acquirements. He was a member of the Congregational church, and his amiability and good humor made him a general favorite.

EMILY ROWENA STANLEY.

(2 JOHN, 5 JOHN, 6 JOHN, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD, 286 CYRUS.)

Born September 11, 1810; married, October 21, 1832, Henry White Clark, son of Ornan and Lucy (Stanley) Clark. He died in Cleveland, Ohio, September 6, 1872. The following notice of his death is from a Cleveland newspaper soon after his death.

"We have published the fact of the prostration, on Wednesday last, of Mr. Henry W. Clark, of paralysis. That gentleman lingered, in an unconscious state, until Friday afternoon, when he died. His age was sixty-eight; the place of his nativity, New Britain, Conn., and he has been a resident of Cleveland since about 1833. Latterly, Mr. Clark has spent the most of his time in Dubuque, but up to a few years past he was among the most active, most liberal, most valuable of Cleveland's citizens. Mr. Clark commenced business here in the dry goods line, under the firm name of H. W. & M. Clark, having a small store on Superior street, near where the Johnson house now stands. Subsequently he became a member of the firms of Clark & Raymond and Clark & Morgan, withdrawing from merchandise some fifteen years since, when he became interested largely and intimately in the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad project.

"The deceased was one of the original members of the Second Presbyterian church, and was one of the few who brought to completion the edifice on Superior street, still occupied by that society, and always was a generous, laborious, and constant friend of that church, with whose name his own was closely allied, and whose memory will be cherished while any of the present members of that society remain.

"But to measure the full merits of the deceased, one needed to cross the threshold of his old home. Mr. Clark had no children, yet himself and wife, the latter having preceded him, and by a sudden death, too, a few years since, had upon their hearts the children of others, and their roof was never too narrow to shelter those dear to them. It was in deeds of beautiful charity that the memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clark blossoms so luxuriously in the dust. They never wearied in giving; and while it is sad to think that a man always so active, always so cheerful, always so just and liberal, should not of the fortune once possessed leave large bequests to those he had adopted, still he does leave a legacy to friends that is above price, and that shall also prove to him a treasure laid up in heaven."

CHARLES NORTON STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 102 GAD, 286 CYRUS.)

Third child of Cyrus and Abigail (Lee) Stanley, born August 18, 1812; married Eliza Seymour, daughter of Pericles and Lovicy (Seymour) Moore, of New Hartford, February 15, 1841. She died May 22, 1851.

Their only child was:

1332 IDA ELIZA, b. Dec. 25, 1843; m. Charles O. Goss.

In 1845 Mr. Stanley went to Texas, which was then an independent republic. He engaged in trade and real estate business, and owned at one time over four thousand acres of farm and timber land. His place of business was Jefferson, near Red river. The town was new at that time, consisting only of a few log houses. He was prosperous in business, being well calculated, by his honorable course, pleasant manners, and ready wit, to gain the confidence and friendship of a pioneer people. He helped to cut away the trees to make way for the first railroad in the town. He and William Perry of Massachusetts conducted this work, and clearing out a small stream to make steamboat navigation to Jefferson. In this work about fifty negro slaves were employed a larger part of two winters. During this time they worked, ate their dinner, and drank their coffee with the slaves to the great gratification of the sable bondmen, who felt pleased to work, eat, and drink in the same way and at the same time with "Massa Perry" and "Massa Stanley." He helped to build every church in town without regard to sect. In 1846 he assisted Rev. J. H. Hill to organize the first Sunday-school in the place, and became one of the teachers; was an alderman of the city several years, and was active in all work for the benefit of the place. He returned

Clark, and is now in care of the widowed family of her nephew, Cyrus T. Stanley, in Cleveland, O. "At seventy years of age," says her brother, Isaac L., "she is healthy and active, and owns her home. She has been of incalculable service to her family, kindly and efficiently caring for all the grandchildren of her parents; is methodical in her habits, rigidly neat in her household management, faithful in the performance of every known duty, of a religious and devotional cast of mind, and is honored and beloved. She may be classed as one of the best modern representatives of the true old Puritan stock."

In the fall of 1871 he took charge of a herd of cattle, numbering 1180 head, belonging to an Englishman by the name of Wilford, and took them to Colorado without the loss of one. The following winter he was engaged in prospecting for coal near Pueblo, Col., in connection with a Pennsylvanian by the name of Charles Willis. Meeting with poor success, and having unfinished business that demanded his attention in Wichita, he returned there on horseback and alone, a ride of over seven hundred miles. He was one time on this trip chased for nine or ten miles by about thirty Indians, and only escaped by the speed and bottom of his horse, with several bullet holes in his clothes. At Wichita he formed a partnership with William Smith, and together they bought and operated the first threshing machine in the Arkansas Valley. After the season closed they went on the buffalo range, and were very successful hunters, sending in over one thousand robes. Returning to Wichita in the spring, Mr. Smith was elected sheriff of the county, and appointed Stanley under-sheriff. During the year that he held this position, his physical endurance was severely taxed more than once. At one time he was in the saddle for twenty hours out of each twenty-four for five days together. At another time in pursuit of horse thieves he rode a hundred and forty-two miles in twenty-six consecutive hours, caught his man, and safely lodged him in jail. In 1881 he returned to New York State, where he has resided since, engaged with his brother George in the manufacture and sale of bee-keeper's supplies, an automatic honey extractor being their specialty. They have also an extensive apiary.

Mr. Stanley had a very diversified life. He early engaged in the manufacture of lace, and was building up quite a large business, when, under a change in the tariff, the importations made it unprofitable. He lived several years in Springfield, Mass., and subsequently went West, where he spent the most of his life in farming. He was always a leader in anti-slavery and temperance measures, and an active member of the church.

HENRY STANLEY.

(1 JOHN, 2 JOHN, 6 THOMAS, 27 THOMAS, 96 THOMAS, 256 LOT, 547 AMON.)

Third child of Amon and Abi (North) Stanley, born September 24, 1807; married, June 10, 1829, Eliza S., daughter of Seth J. and Elizabeth North (No. 283). After her death he married, September 5, 1838, Catharine A., daughter of Gad and Chloe Stanley (No. 281). He died May 3, 1884, aged seventy-seven.

Their children were :

By first wife,

- 1925 WALTER HENRY, b. June 25, 1830; m. Mary J. Peck.
- 1926 THEODORE AUGUSTUS, b. July 22, 1833. He was 2d lieutenant in company F, 14th reg. Conn. Vols. In the absence of his captain he bravely led his company in the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., where he was mortally wounded, and died Dec. 31, 1862, at Washington, D. C. He was buried in New Britain with military honors, Jan. 5, 1863.

By second wife,

- 1927 MARY LOUISA, b. May 8, 1840; d. Sept. 9, 1840.
- 1928 LOUISA CATHARINE, b. April 7, 1842; d. Mar. 26, 1847.
- 1929 FREDERICK NORTH, b. Mar. 17, 1844; m. Mary Welch and Alice S. Moore.
- 1930 CATHARINE AMELIA, b. Oct. 10, 1849.

Henry Stanley left the farm at an early age, and before he was twenty-one was a partner with Alvin North in the manufacture of plated goods. After about two years he engaged in business with Seth J. North and John Stanley. This firm continued many years under the names of North, Stanley & Co., North, Smith, & Stanley, and Henry Stanley & Co. The latter, composed of the three brothers, Henry, Augustus, and Timothy W. Stanley, was merged in the Russell & Erwin Manufacturing Company, of which Henry Stanley was a large stockholder and prominent director until his death. He, with O. H. Seymour, was the originator of the New Britain Knitting Company, and was for years its president and manager. He was one of the chief founders of the American Hosiery Company, and its president, as he also was of the Stanley Rule & Level Company, and of the Stanley Works, after the death of F. T. Stanley. Of the Willimantic Linen Company he was a large stockholder and director, and also of various other manufacturing concerns.

His character was specially distinguished by an unquestioned integrity, and an admirable calmness and poise, which enabled him to pass through the financial crises of his long business career, never discouraged by reverses, nor unduly elated by success, illustrating in his life the truth of the old adage, "All things are possible to him who waits."

In manner he was genial, though somewhat reticent; in taste remarkably appreciative of all that was beautiful in nature and art. An illustration of this may be seen in the fine mansion erected by him on South Main street, a few years before his death, with the handsome grounds attached to it, where his daughter

James Stanley

Catharine now resides. He was a man of wealth, and gave liberally and judiciously to philanthropic, educational, and religious objects. He spent time and money freely to promote the material interests of his native town. In the centennial year, 1876, he set out one hundred shade trees on Walnut Hill Park, extending from West Main street along the driveway to near the summit of the hill. Through his life he was deeply interested in the politics of his country, maintaining ever its interests and honor as a patriotic citizen.

He united with the church in his youth, and after it was divided, upon the formation of the South church, in 1842, was one of the first members.

Mrs. Catharine A. Stanley was during most of her life in delicate health, but her mental activity, devotion to her family, and unselfish interest in all who needed her sympathy and help, more than compensated for her physical weakness. As a wife and mother, and in all the relations of life, she possessed the confidence and love, not only of her immediate friends, but also of many who enjoyed the hospitality of their pleasant home, and had the privilege of her acquaintance. She died November, 1881, aged seventy.

After a time became a partner under the name "North, Churchill & Stanley," until the death of Mr. North in 1838, after which the business was continued under the firm name of "Churchill & Stanley" for many years. In 1864 Mr. Stanley retired from the business.

All through his life he was intensely interested in the great questions of the day, especially in the anti-slavery and temperance causes, and battled nobly and unflinchingly in their behalf.

Mrs. Anna W. Stanley was a woman of uncommon brightness and force of character. Their long and happy union of more than a quarter of a century was blessed by the birth of nine children.

Their home was the center of a warm-hearted and generous hospitality, both being of one mind and heart in all deeds of philanthropy and benevolence, and taking a deep interest in all that concerned the welfare of church and town.

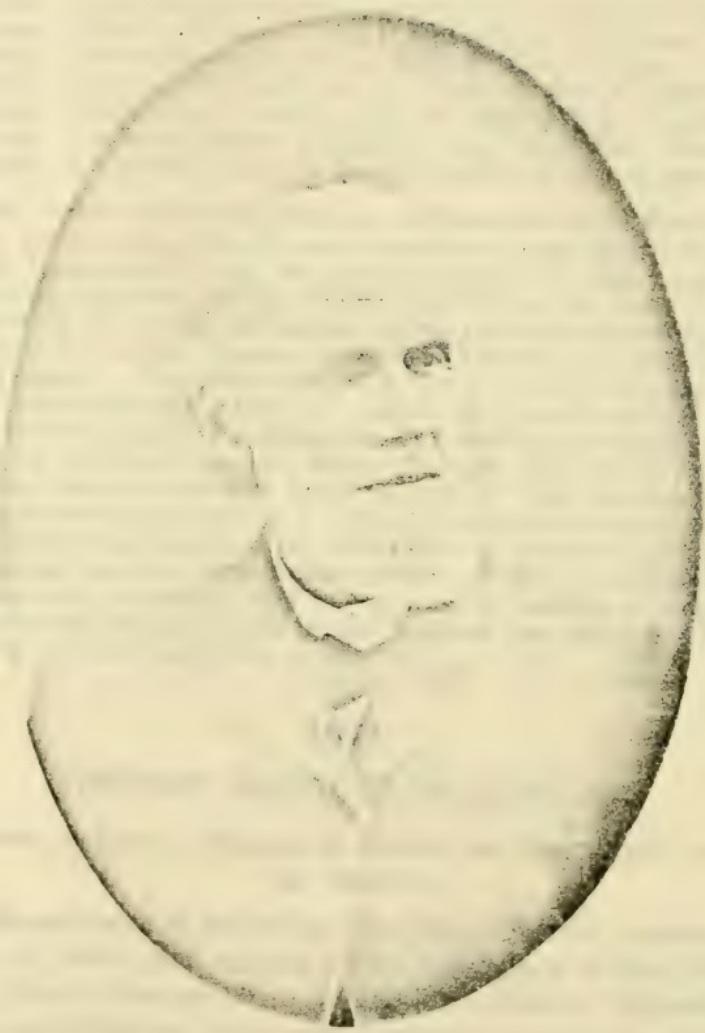

Alice G. Stanley has never married, but has been at the head of her father's family, performing the duties of a mother with untiring devotion and fidelity for many years. At the same time, she has been among the foremost in efforts for the religious and social interests of the church, the Sabbath-school, and the community. It is due to her to say that the enterprise of preparing this Genealogy of the Stanley Families originated in her suggestion, and that she has been an untiring advocate and assistant therein from the first until its completion.

The new firm took the name of the "Stanley Rule and Level Company." The business has been on the whole prosperous. The capital stock is now $300,000. Mr. Stanley has been from the first one of the directors and managers, and has given his attention largely to the introduction of labor-saving machinery, and the erection of suitable buildings, such as the steady growth of the business has required. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley sailed from Boston in the ship Sarah Newman, bound for Shanghai, July 1, 1862. After a tedious and monotonous voyage of six months, they reached Shanghai in safety. Tientsin, a city some five hundred miles to the north of Shanghai, was their destined station, but the season was so far advanced it was impossible to proceed on this second stage of the journey until the following spring. They arrived at Tientsin March 13, 1863, and have resided there until the present time. They have seen the North China Mission of the A. B. C. F. M. grow from one man to its present working force of men and women, and not only this mission, but the well-established missions of six other prominent societies, both English and American. Mr. Stanley has from the beginning taken active part in most branches of missionary effort, especially in evangelistic and itinerant work. The North was a new field twenty-five years ago, but through the faithful, patient labors of combined and harmonious forces, schools and colleges, dispensaries and hospitals, chapels and numerous preaching places have been established, and the good seed sown over the area of three provinces. Mr. Stanley has been in the midst of this good work continuously, with the exception of a short furlough of eighteen months in the years 1872 and 1873, made necessary by the health of his family. He returned to China in the autumn of 1873, and has remained at his post to the present time.

The esteem in which this young man was held is fittingly expressed in an obituary notice which was published soon after his death :—

"The loss of this young man, only twenty-six years of age, is a serious one to the community, for he was an exceedingly useful and valuable citizen. He was a good machinist, had a sound mind, strong convictions, pure purposes, well-defined ideas of duty and genuine enthusiasm in any work which his conscience told him should be done. He was employed by the Stanley Rule and Level Company, and was much respected by his employers and fellow-workmen. Such an exemplary life as his just passed, can not soon be forgotten."

TIMOTHY STANLEY AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

TIMOTHY STANLEY.

Born in England in January, 1602-3; came to New England in 1634, and to Hartford in 1636. In the divisions of lands among the first settlers, "according to the proportions payed for the purchase of sayd lands," he had two parcels allotted to him, of 32 and 36 acres, making 68 in all, which was much above the average. Out of 95 names of the planters who thus received lands, only 19 had more than he, while 116 received less. The two highest allotments were made to John Haynes and George Wyllys, of 200 acres each. This indicates, what is apparent from other considerations, that he was one of the wealthier men of the settlement, implying corresponding position in his English home.

This location was on the west side of what is now Front street, nearly opposite to the "lane" leading down to the landing, now Kilbourn street, and one of the nearest to the banks of the "Great River." Here he pursued the vocation of a farmer, having, as appears from his inventory, his "dwelling-house and house lott, and little meadow lott, and outhows-ing (perhaps barns) with uplands," also eight acres of meadow and swamp in the North meadow, and three acres of meadow and some uplands on the east side of the river, the whole of the appraised value of £127. Subsequently he purchased also land and hawsing at the newer settlement over the mountain on the west, called probably from the fine meadows on the Tunxis river "Farmington," valued at his death at forty pounds, making a total of real estate of £167. Five children were born to him, two sons and three daughters, beside the baby they had brought over the water, who died young.

Here Mr. Stanley lived in honor and industry thirteen years, till April, 1648. The little niece Ruth, whom he had adopted on the death of her father, grew up to be a girl of sixteen, when, with her brother John, who was barely four years older, she was married on the same day, December 5, 1645, and went to make a new home in Farmington, which was settled that year, possibly on the lands which their uncle purchased for them there. In those colonial days, early marriages were the rule rather than the exception. There was so much to be done in planting and subduing the wilderness that no time must be lost in getting about it. He received the testimony of his neighbors to his worth in being chosen in 1642 "townsman" or selectman, one of the trusty citizens that managed the town affairs. Everything that is recorded of him indicates that he was a man of dignity, good substance, and piety, worthy of the sincere respect of his numerous descendants.

He died while yet comparatively young, in the spring of 1648, aged forty-five. The inventory of his estate was presented to the court October 16, and as affording a vivid glimpse of the manner of living of that day among well-to-do people, is worthy of being copied here.

October 16th, 1648.

This is a true copy of the originall being examined & compared therewith this 5th day of January 1670, by me.

John Allyn, Secretary.

It is not difficult, with the help of this instrument, to reproduce to the mind's eye the picture of this Puritan home. It stands fronting the east, with nothing to intercept the view of the charming landscape of the river winding through the broad meadows, whose fertility had first invited the settlers thither. It is a small two-story building, having on the first floor only the hall and "kitchinn," the latter serving alike for a cook-room, living-room, and parlor. Meager enough is the furniture; a deal table, with a "form" or bench for sitting upon at meals, and standing in winter before the great open fireplace, whose "cobirons" (andirons) support the massive sticks of wood overhung by the long trammels in the chimney. Such a luxury as a carpet is unknown. A few pots and kettles, and some humbler utensils, are hung in the fireplace, or deposited on rough shelves overhead. The emigrant's armory of a sword, two muskets, and a fowling-piece, with "bandoleers" (pouches for powder and bullets to be slung from the shoulders), are suspended on the wainscoting, ready for instant use; and for mental recreation and the education of the children twenty shillings worth of books, including, of course, the Bible, are carefully deposited on some shelf safest from injury.

The "hall" shows a clothes-press and another table, with a warming-pan for making the children's beds comfortable in the bitterly cold winter; the big sieve with which the farmer cleans his wheat, and the half-bushe^l with which he measures it; and somewhere in some safe nook the family purse, with the strings of Indian wrought beads or wampum, which served as money, so many strings for an English shilling.

We ascend to the chamber over the kitchen, the main sleeping-room of the house. Here are three chairs, one bedstead, apparently the only one in the house, with a feather-bed and sheets, one pair of which are linen, the rest either of hemp or tow. A trundle-bed for the little ones pushes under the bedstead, and on the floor in one corner is a "flock bed," i.e., a bag stuffed with bits of cloth, wool or tow, serving the place of feathers. The rest of the family linen is kept in the chest standing between the two front windows, and in the box in the opposite corner. The chamber adjacent, over the hall, seems to be a general store room, where is kept the family plate, all of pewter, carefully deposited in one of the trunks or chests, the wearing apparel of the household, with a dozen dressed skins for making leather breeches, and four large casks where the farmer probably stores the provisions and breadstuffs that need safe keeping. In the attic, still higher up, is another flock bed, without chair or mirror, the boudoir, perhaps, of Ruth and the older daughters.

A little out building near by serves the farmer for a "workshop," where he keeps his tools and supplies of leather, which the itinerant shoemaker, in his round of visits to various houses, will work up into shoes for the family. The narrow loft overhead accommodates a third flock bed where, it may be, the hired men sleep. Those among us who sigh for "the good old times," would do well to study the arrangements of such a home as this, and consider how they would like to substitute it for the elegant and luxurious abodes of the present day.

Of the wife of Timothy Stanley we only know that her name was Elizabeth. It has been intimated, we know not on what authority, that her maiden name was Morrice. After his death, having lived a widow thirteen years, she married, in 1661, Andrew Bacon. He was one of the Hartford colonists, but having been one of the most active in the church controversy there with Rev. Mr. Stone, he joined with others in the removal to Hadley in 1659, where he died ten years later, October 4, 1669. He left no children. Mrs. Bacon died in Hartford, February 23, 1678-9, aged about 76.

The children of Timothy and Elizabeth Stanley were:

- 2 TIMOTHY, b. in England, Jan., 1634; died young.
- 3 ELIZABETH, m. Mark Sension (St. John).
- 4 ABIGAIL, m., June 14, 1660, Samuel Cowles.

A petition appears Aug. 20, 1751, praying that the towns in that part of the colony be made a new county, signed from Harwinton by Timothy Stanley Jr., and a remonstrance against the same signed by Timothy Stanley and others.

In January, 1776, Captain Bezaleel Beebe, of Litchfield, received orders to enlist a company for the defense of New York against the British. In the list of volunteers for this company were Frederick Stanley, Jesse Stanley, and James Crampton, "who carried Whiting Stanley's gun." Frederick Stanley "carried Jedediah Strong's gun."

In May, 1776, a regiment was ordered to be raised, and Capt. Beebe had command of one of the companies. In it are the names of Timothy and Frederick Stanley.

About Nov. 1, 1776, thirty-six "picked men" of this company were sent to Fort Washington, near New York, to aid in its defense. The fort, however, was taken by the enemy Nov. 16, and the garrison made prisoners. The men were put into the prison-ships, where many died of small-pox, dysentery, and other diseases. Timothy Stanley died on the prison-ship Dec. 26, 1776.

I find his death in an old Geography, which was his, published about the year 1750. He gave it to my uncle Stanley Griswold. He (Stanley) wrote an epitaph on a blank leaf of the Geography in Latin, stating when he died, that he was unmarried, rich in works, flocks, and fields; was learned, a leader of the people, much beloved, and there was great lamentation when he died," etc.

Theodore Stanley, a prominent man in his day, lived on what is known as the Stillman-Putnam place. Before him lived Lieut. William Stanley, the first of the name that settled in the town. He was the grandfather of the present selectman, William M. Stanley. Across the way lived Col. Ashbel and Elisha Stanley. They had a clothier's shop north of the house, and were engaged in that business. It was afterward moved to the north side of Charles Pitkin's house, and James Stanley and Nathaniel Pitkin carried on the clothing business till 1717. Theodore Stanley was one of those who enlisted before the division of the town in 1783, for the relief of Boston in April, 1775. He was surveyor of highways in 1783. Freemen used to vote by rising for town and state officers, when a few sturdy democrats faced an overwhelming majority, for many years always standing to be counted, "the same old ten," as they were called year after year. Theodore Stanley was one, showing the sturdy independence that characterized the Stanleys. My father voted for Gen. Jackson, but was ever after a Whig. Democracy in name is, was, and has been, a rare thing among the Stanleys in my line.

Second child of Timothy and Mary (Hopkins) Stanley, of Litchfield, was born June 10, 1756, and married, 1776, Amasa Castle, of Litchfield. He removed to Ashtabula, O., about the year 1800.

Their children were :

- 210 LYDIA CASTLE, b. ——; m. Myer Bradley, of Plymouth, Ct., and moved to Burlington, Ct.; d. about 1830.
- 211 MARY CASTLE, b. at Plymouth, Ct., April 17, 1780; m., in Jan., 1800, Russell Reynolds; d. Sept. 27, 1868.
- 212 CLARISSA CASTLE.
- 213 PAMELA CASTLE.
- 214 ELIZA CASTLE.
- 215 DANIEL CASTLE. Mrs. H. L. Morrison, of Ashtabula, is his daughter.
- 216 AMASA CASTLE. Mrs. Emily Kellogg, of Ashtabula, is his daughter.

" Died in Plymouth, Ashtabula Co., O., Dec. 12, 1862, Daniel Castle, in the 81st year of his age. Mr. Castle was one of the earliest settlers of Ashtabula, having emigrated from Vermont in the year 1810. In the war of 1812 he was among the first to volunteer in defense of his country, and was in the army under Gen. Harrison, at Fort Meigs, the first stick for the pickets of that fort having been cut by himself. The hardships and privations of that campaign broke down a naturally strong constitution, and for forty years or more past he was disabled to a great extent. And after much suffering he has at length passed away to his reward, leaving a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his departure."

" Died in Ashtabula, Sept. 5, 1846, at the residence of her son, Amasa Castle, Mrs. Mary Stanley Castle, relict of Amasa Castle, sen., aged 90 years and three months. The deceased was born in Litchfield, Ct., June 10, 1756. She embraced religion at an early period of life, and by her subsequent years told how well she adorned the profession of her youth. She was ever an exemplary Christian, a kind, affectionate, and sympathizing partner, mother, and friend, and was universally esteemed by all who knew her. Living at the eventful period of the Revolution, she had known many of the trials and dangers which then thronged round the 'little few' who strove for life and liberty; and it was often her lot, and well did she act her part, to cheer on to the conflict for freedom those whom she loved, and whose arms had else grown weary, and their hands faint, when they saw the threatening clouds of despotism lowering over the little band of patriots who had 'sworn to die if they could not live freemen.' She has left a large circle of friends to mourn her loss, but they are comforted by the recollection that she died in the triumphs of faith, and that their loss is her unspeakable gain."

FREDERICK STANLEY.

(1 TIMOTHY, 5 CALEB, 30 CALEB, 58 TIMOTHY, 74 TIMOTHY.)

small pox, etc. He had been discharged from Capt. Beebe's company.

The following obituary notice is copied from a newspaper, probably of Oswego. "Died in Oswego, April 19, 1842, Frederick Stanley, Esq., aged 84 years and 4 days. Mr. Stanley was a native of Connecticut. He entered the American army at the commencement of the Revolutionary struggle, and at intervals rendered his service to his country during the war. He was by occupation a merchant, and as such his integrity was proverbial. As a man, he was beloved and respected by all who had the good fortune to count him as an acquaintance. A pure patriot and humble Christian, he faithfully discharged his duty to God and men. As a friend, a husband and father, he was without reproach, and has left behind him a character worthy of emulation even by the wisest and best."

Miss Hungerford writes: "In a letter written by Mrs. Luke Dewey, Sept. 10, 1848, she mentions Frederick (deceased), perhaps her brother. I presume Dr. Dewey was administrator of George Stanley's estate. Mrs. George Stanley died at her daughter's in W. Stockbridge, in Aug. 3, 1848. Mrs. Dewey's sister Catharine married a Major Laffargue, a French gentleman. I do not know how he got his title. I find a letter written July 22, 1819, to my father, from John B. Stanley, from Warrenton, Warren Co., Miss.; possibly he was a brother of Mrs. Dewey's."

His two wives were granddaughters of Rev. Samuel Hopkins, D.D., the celebrated divine.

Miss F. E. Hungerford, of Watertown, N. Y., writes: "Caleb Stanley lived in Charleston, S. C., several years, but left that city on account of his wife's health Nov. 23, 1812, in the sloop 'Concord' (as near as I can decipher the name) for New York. A gale commenced on the 28th, and the vessel was forced by winds and waves upon shoals about 130 miles from New York. They were taken from the wreck there, and an account of their sufferings, and the number of miles they traveled each day in reaching Great Barrington, is given. Mrs. Stanley (Betsey Hopkins) died in G. B., December 26, 1812, from the effects of this exposure. Caleb afterward returned to Charleston. I find a letter written to him there, March, 1813, and several others in the same year. He married his second wife, Nancy Hopkins, in G. B., Sept. 3, 1815. She died Jan. 8, 1856, at the house of her brother Charles, in the same place. Mrs. Charles Hopkins was a sister of Mrs. William C. Bryant."

He was a militia major, and taken prisoner by the British in the war of 1812, and afterwards exchanged. He was also port collector very early in the history of Cape Vincent, and later in life a farmer on the St. Lawrence, a few miles from C. V. Those early years were eventful ones, and they often suffered annoyance from British and Indian intruders. I have heard my mother, who then lived with Mr. and Mrs. E., tell of passing a night in the woods for safety. I have an impression that Mr. E. was a land agent for LeRoy, but am not certain."

He was a merchant here for more than twenty years, and possessed very superior natural abilities; was speaker and a leader in the House of Representatives while here, and had a reputation throughout the State. One of the ablest men in our town in his day said he was better qualified to be president of the United States than James Monroe. Few, if any, men of our town were ever his superior in natural abilities."

He spent the rest of his days on his farm, where his son, W. M. Stanley, now lives. He was a man six feet two inches in stockings, weighed 265 pounds, with a strong mind, and was a very extensive reader; one of the best authorities on ancient history, very rarely finding his match; a very retentive memory, could carry more figures in his head than almost any man you could find, doing very difficult sums by analysis very rapidly. - 808 MARY R. ; died in 1878.

THOMAS STANLEY AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

THOMAS STANLEY, probably the youngest of the three emigrant brothers, came with Timothy and the orphan children of his brother John to Cambridge in 1634; was appointed guardian of John, the eldest of those children; made freeman in March, 1635; settled first in Lynn, where he was chosen a member of the General Court and constable, and removed to Hartford in June, 1636. In the division of lands there he was assigned two parcels of forty-two acres each, and a house lot thus described on the record: 1 acre, 1 rood, "abutting on the highway lying on the North side of the Little River on the south, and on the highway leading from the Palisado to the Centinell hill on the East, & on Rich: Olmsteds land on the North, and on Thomas Lords land on the West." This was on the west side of the present Main street, running from the bridge over the Little River to the Center church, a most valuable location, generally known since as "Stanley's Corner."

Though a young man at this time, Mr. Stanley soon took an important position in the affairs of the town. He was a juryman in 1639 and 1643, and a constable in 1644, 1647, 1648, and 1653. This office was then one of the most responsible in the settlement, combining the duties of the modern sheriff and policeman, and being charged in general with preserving the order and decorum of the place. It devolved on him to summon the courts, General and Particular, to their sessions, and the freemen to their elections, to execute the decrees of the courts and the laws, to enforce order in public worship, to arrest and confine offenders, to administer the frequent whippings which were ordered in punishment of petty crimes, inflicting so many lashes "well laid on," a duty requiring a steady nerve and a strong arm.

One requirement of the law, so unique, and if still in force so onerous to perform, is worthy of being cited here:

"It is ordered, That no man within this colonye, after the publication hereof, shall take any tobacco publiquely, in the streett, highwayes, or any barne yardes, or uppon training dayes, in any open places, under the penalty of sixpence for each offence against this order, in any the particulars thereof, to bee paid without gainsaying upon conviction by the testimony of one witness, that is without just exception before any one magistrate. And the constables in the severall townes are required to make presentment to each particular courte of such as they doe understand, and can evict to bee, transgressors of this order."

It is obvious that no man who was not himself of exemplary character and possessing the highest confidence of the townsmen, could have filled this office for several years in succession as he did. Whether the accident referred to in another quaint record was met with in some official service of a vigorous sort is not mentioned.

"Thomas Standly of Hartford complaining to the Courte of a disability in one of his armes (w'ch was broken not long since) to handle his Armes and to do his postures in military discipline vpon training dayes, this Courte frees ye sd Thomas Standly from his training till they shall see just cause for altering the same."

In the year 1659, Thomas Stanley and his family, with some others, removed from Hartford, and commenced a new settlement at Hadley, Mass.

The cause of this step, which must have cost those engaging in it so much both of feeling and substance, is to be found primarily in the great controversy which for several years had prevailed in the Hartford church. The origin of this controversy was obscure, and apparently trivial in its immediate objects, but the principles, involved were important, and the disturbance caused by it far spreading through all New England. Rev. Mr. Hooker, the senior minister or "pastor," having died in 1647, the question arose of appointing a successor. A Mr. Wigglesworth preached there a few times in 1653 and 1654 with some acceptance, and the church were about to consider giving him a call, when the other minister or "teacher," Rev. Samuel Stone, forbade their action, conceiving it, as he said, "a received Truth yt an officer may in some cases lawfully hinder ye church fro putting forth at this or yt time an act of her liberty." As might have been expected, this arbitrary step was warmly opposed by a minority of the church, and after a protracted controversy, led to their withdrawal, with a demand for a mutual council to review the whole case. Their communication was signed by twenty-one persons, among whom were the Deputy-Governor Webster, Andrew Bacon, who afterwards married Timothy Stanley's widow, Thomas Stanley, Gregory Wolterton, who married Thomas Stanley's widow, and others. This council was granted, and its decision was a substantial vindication of the position of the minority. It recommended "satisfaction for mutuall offences" be given, "or in case of non-satisfaction," "dismission of the dissenting brethren."

This led to a new dispute as to what was proper "satisfaction," with calling of new councils, two of which were from Boston and vicinity, and extensive correspondence with other churches and ministers, both in Connecticut and Massachusetts. The General Court, or colonial legislature, even took the matter up, and attempted to determine proceedings by authority of law, which only added new fuel to the flame. At last "the withdrawers," as they were called, apparently tired of the contest, and disgusted with the intermeddling of the civil power, made up their minds to leave the colony itself, and sent a petition to the General Court of Massachusetts for permission to make a settlement in Hadley. It was granted on condition that they first settled the controversy with the church in Hartford. For this purpose one more council was held, in Boston, Sept. 26, 1656, composed of nine churches and seventeen members, which in a session of ten days or more came to a conclusion that was in form accepted on both sides. It distributed blame pretty equally all round, but all were apparently ready to receive this for the sake of the censures put upon their opponents, and no doubt, also, from a general feeling of shame for what had taken place, and of necessity that the scandal should go no further. It had been productive of great evil to the colony and to all the churches, but its results undoubtedly established the liberties of the churches as against arbitrary ministerial authority, and in this view were perhaps worth all they cost. It is the judgment of Dr. Walker, after a careful survey of the whole affair, that "the verdict of history must be that spite, of many irregularities, and, doubtless, a good deal of ill temper on both sides, the general weight of right and justice was with the defeated and emigrating minority." Hist. of the First Church, page 175.

Though Thomas Stanley and his family removed from Hartford, he did not dispose of his house and lands there. At his death he left them to his only son, Nathaniel, who after the decease of his mother, returned and made his home there. They remained in the line of his descendants until they were bequeathed by his grandson William to the Second church in 1738. He died January 31, 1663, and was buried at Hadley. His will, which is on record in Northampton, gives us interesting particulars as to his home and his family.

Thomas Standley.

BENETT STANLEY. Such is the mode in which her husband spells her name. It is, I suppose, an abridged form of "Benedicta," the feminine of "Benedictus." It is spelled several ways in the old records and manuscripts, as "Bennet," "Benett," and "Bennett." On her gravestone in Hartford it is "Benet." What her maiden name was has not been ascertained.

After the death of Thomas Stanley she married Gregory Wilterton of Hartford, one of the first settlers there, about whose name there is the same wide liberty of orthography. The inventory of her estate, drawn up probably by Andrew Bacon, one of the chief settlers, has it as here, "Gregory Wilterton." His wife spells it "Wolterton;" Walker in his History gives it "Winter-ton;" and his gravestone in Hartford, "Welltarton." The reader may choose for himself among them.

ABIGAIL STANLEY.

(1 THOMAS, 2 NATHANIEL, 12 NATHANIEL.)

Seventh child of Col. Nathaniel and Anna (Whiting) Stanley, born July 24, 1719; married Rev. Elnathan Whitman, son of Rev. Samuel Whitman, of Farmington, and his wife, Mary Stoddard, daughter of Rev. Solomon Stoddard, of Northampton, and sister of Esther Stoddard, the mother of Pres. Jonathan Edwards. He graduated at Yale College in 1726, and was for several years a tutor there, and afterwards a member of the corporation. He was settled as pastor of the Second church in Hartford, November 29, 1732. He filled this important place with dignity and success nearly forty-four years, and died March 2, 1776, aged sixty-eight. There are portraits of both Mr. and Mrs. Whitman painted from life in the gallery of the Athenæum in Hartford.

Their children were :

- 91 ABIGAIL WHITMAN ; d. in Hartford, Nov. 12, 1820, aged 74.

- 93 MARY WHITMAN ; m. Dr. R. Skinner ; d. Mar. 15, 1834.
- 94 WILLIAM WHITMAN ; a physician ; graduated Y. C. 1779.

Mrs. Whitman survived her husband nineteen years, dying Nov. 19, 1795, aged 76. Her widowhood was deeply shadowed with sorrow. Her house, with all its contents, was burned to the ground, comprising "many curious and valuable articles of furniture, both for use and ornament, but embracing also an uncommon library, overflowing with rare books, pamphlets, etc., which her late husband had collected with great effort and research." But the heaviest trial for her widowed heart was the tragic fortunes and death of her daughter Elizabeth, which became the theme of a romantic story of fascinating interest to readers. The book was written by Mrs. Hannah Foster, wife of Rev. John Foster, of Brighton, Mass., under the title, "The Coquette, or The Life and Letters of Eliza Wharton. A novel founded on Fact." It passed through numberless editions both in this country and abroad. Miss Whitman was a beauty and a wit, and was conspicuous in the gay circle of poets and gallants that constituted the society of Hartford a hundred years ago. She became engaged to a young clergyman of Boston, a Rev. Mr. Howe, who suddenly died at her father's house in 1775. Subsequently she was, it is said, under cover of a secret marriage, betrayed and forsaken, and at length died incognito in Danvers, Mass., July 25, 1788, where her grave remains.

The following specimen of her poetry was addressed to Joel Barlow, the poet and her intimate friend, as a New Year's greeting.

"On this blest morning's most auspicious rise,
 Which finds thee circled with domestic joys,
 May thy glad heart its grateful tribute pay
 To Him who shaped thy course and smoothed thy way,—
 That guardian Power, who to thy merit kind,
 Bestowed the bliss most suited to thy mind,—
 Retirement, friendship, leisure, learned ease,
 All that the philosophic mind can please;
 All that the Muses love, the harmonious Nine
 Inspire thy lays, and aid the great design.
 But more than all the world could else bestow,
 All pleasures that from fame or fortune flow.
 To fix secure in bliss thy future life,
 Heaven crowned thy blessings with a lovely wife,
 Wise, gentle, good, with every grace combined
 That charms the sense or captivates the mind;
 Skilled every soft emotion to improve,
 The joy of friendship and the wish of love;
 To soothe the heart which pale Misfortune's train
 Invades with grief or agonizing pain;
 To point through devious paths the narrow road
 That leads the soul to virtue and to God.
 O friend, O sister, to my bosom dear
 By every tie that binds the soul sincere;
 Oh, while I fondly dwell upon thy name,
 Why sinks my soul, unequal to the theme?
 But though unskilled thy various worth to praise,
 Accept my wishes and excuse my lays.
 May all thy future days, like this, be gay,
 And love and fortune blend their kindest ray;
 Long in their various gifts mayst thou be blessed,
 And late ascend the realms of endless rest."

He had a large property, and having no children to survive him, left, it is said, most of it to the Second church. His sister Abigail was at that time wife of Rev. Mr. Whitman, pastor of that church. He married Ruth Seymour, daughter of Thomas Seymour, and died in 1782, aged forty-two.

(1 THOMAS, 2 NATHANIEL, 12 NATHANIEL, 52 NATHANIEL.)

Probably eldest son of Nathaniel and Mary (Marshall) Stanley, of Windsor, Conn., married Sarah Allyn. Nothing has been ascertained of his family.

His name is on the records of Windsor, Conn., under date of July 30, 1783, as "late of Windsor, now removed to parts unknown." He is believed to have gone with his family before that year to Mifflin County, Pa., on the Juniata river, where he owned an extensive tract of land. His will is on record in Wayne township of that county, dated November 17, 1796, in which his wife and children are named, and Nathaniel Stanley and Gen. John Bratton are appointed executors.

Their children were :

100 ELIZABETH; m. Daniel Dull.

103 MARY.

104 WILLIAM, b. 1774; m. Margaret Bratton.

Marshall Stanley was on the pay-roll of the First Regiment of Connecticut troops in 1761. Records.

In confirmation of the opinion that Marshall Stanley was of Connecticut, Gen. D. S. Stanley says that it was always understood in the family that Nathaniel and William Stanley emigrated from Hartford. A part of the Stanley tract in Mifflin County was patented in 1766 as "Mount Pleasant," a part also as "Stanley's Choice." It is inferred that he came hither or made an investment in these lands about that time.

Mrs. Thamor Stanley appears to have married again after her husband's death, for Nathaniel is said to have had a half-brother, Ferdinand Vannata, who had a family of 21 children.

John Lawrence, Esq., attorney, of Nashville, Tenn., a son of Lucinda Stanley, writes: "My recollection of grandfather William Stanley is quite distinct. He lived, when I knew him, on a large farm several miles from what is now called Congress (in Ohio). He had rich meadows, good clover fields, good horses and cows. He was a Presbyterian of the old Puritan stamp; an honored elder in the church. In person he was tall, well-proportioned, and dignified. Every night and morning we were called in for prayers. It was never a hurried service. A full chapter was read, and then a prayer of old-fashioned Puritan length was offered. I can now recall, he never curtailed his prayer on account of the lateness of the hour, or the hurry of business. Dear, stately, venerable man."

Judge Lawrence writes: "I remember Wm. Boyd Stanley, as a tall, slender, delicate, scholarly man, who had thoughts of the ministry."

"The McCoys were very bright people. Some of them had red hair, and the girls had, so I now think, very bright, fine eyes."

"My dear mother, Lucinda, was married at sixteen, and she used to say that when the minister who married her prayed that she might be 'a fruitful vine,' and that her children might grow up and around her 'like olive plants,' she blushed red. But, dear, sainted soul, she was a fruitful vine, having given birth to nine boys and one girl. Cyrus, one of her sons, was a minister, and died in Indiana. Boyd, another, named after uncle Boyd Stanley, was a lawyer, went to Australia, and died of fever in less than a year after his arrival at Melbourne. Elmer and Stewart are physicians. Orin, the youngest son, and Mary, the only daughter, are on the stage. All the others are dead, Russell, next to the youngest son, sleeping in an honored soldier's grave."

"Uncle Nathaniel was a most devout man. He believed that God had, for some inscrutable reason, 'chosen him as one of the elect from the foundation of the world.'"

(1 THOMAS, 2 NATHANIEL, 12 NATHANIEL, 55 AUGUSTUS,

Youngest child of Whiting and Abigail (Day) Stanley, was born in Cheshire, Conn., January 24, 1795, and married in Canandaigua, N. Y., February 11, 1818, Maria, daughter of —— Castle.

- 402 FREDERICK G., b. March, 1824; m. Julia Ann Nethanny

- 407 EMORY DAY, b. May 5, 1836; m. Isabel Jaques and Elizabeth Howie.
- 408 DANIEL CASTLE, b. May 5, 1839; m. Augusta Wilkins.

Mr. Stanley resided in Canandaigua till 1847, when he removed with five of his younger children to Wisconsin, and bought 500 acres, mostly of the government, for a family homestead. This was in Dane County, the city of Madison being their trading point and grain market. After a few years all his children except the second son moved and settled in the near vicinity. "Mr. Stanley was ever on the side of reform in politics, voting in 1820 for James Monroe; in 1828 for John Q. Adams; in 1832 for William Wirt, antimason. He was a republican till the anti-slavery party was organized, when he joined that party, and was an active worker in politics and the church till the end of the rebellion. He died in 1877, and his wife in 1873."

In September, 1882, a family gathering was held at the old homestead, at which all the children but Daniel, the youngest, were present, and a large number of grandchildren. The estate was then in the possession of William Stanley, and as the home of the parents was the center of interest for the whole family. A poem was written for the occasion by Miss Edna Gunnison, a relative, the concluding lines of which were:

" May many a hundred years roll by,
 Before our latest one shall lie
 As all must lie. May not a name
 Be written with a blush of shame.
 May every son his honor fair
 Through good report and evil bear.
 May every daughter prove her birth
 Of lineage pure by her own worth.
 In short, we offer as our toast,
 'Long life to all, both guest and host.'
 We shout the name that down the years
 Of storied past the listener hears,
 That last strong cry of Marmion
 Is ours today, 'On, STANLEY, on !'"

Mrs. Post writes: "When I was a girl I used to hear a good deal said about 'the Stanley pride.' I did not know what we had to be proud of, nor do I yet. Perhaps your forthcoming Genealogy will reveal it. I also remember hearing them talk about the Stanley 'get up and dust.' I think I saw something of that trait in my father; he used to get up with the birds, and retire soon after dark, and work very laboriously during the day. His father died early, and I believe my father was sent to live with an aunt or uncle out of Hartford, where he staid till he was fourteen years of age. Some of us children inherited his remarkable energy, but not his vigorous constitution; therefore overwork and prostration. All my relations, so far as I know, who were professing Christians, were Congregationalists, loyal sons of the Pilgrims."

HEADQUARTERS MIL. DIV. OF THE TENNESSEE, }
NASHVILLE, TENN., Sept. 14, 1865. }

HON. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

SIR:—In an especial and particular manner I desire to call your attention to the services and merits of Maj.-Gen. D. S. Stanley, Commanding 4th Army Corps, asking your favorable consideration of the same, and requesting that he receive such promotion in the Army of the United States as shall be deemed consistent with the interests of the service, and not unjust to him.

Major-General Stanley has served in the same army with myself since the year 1862, and under my command from the time I took command of the Department of the Cumberland until his Corps was ordered to Texas.

Occupying the intimate relations to each other of superior and subordinate, and being of necessity closely allied to each other, I had abundant opportunity both to observe and judge of his ability and capacity as an officer, and I am therefore not at a loss to speak intelligently on the subject.

In the discharge of his duties in the various positions held by him as a Division and Corps Commander, as well as in less responsible positions, he has given entire satisfaction. By his personal attention to the wants and necessities of the troops subject to his orders, he was enabled to report more than the usual proportion as being fit for duty, and though a strict disciplinarian, his just and impartial treatment of all won for him the respect and high esteem of his entire command. Careful and skillful in the handling and management of troops, both in putting them in proper positions, and in directing movements under fire, he at all times exhibited before his troops those sterling qualities of a true soldier which they were but waiting to adopt as their own, and with their leader breast the storm of battle. A more cool and brave commander it would be a difficult task to find, and although he has been a participant in many of the most sanguinary engagements in the West, his conduct has on all occasions been so gallant that it would be almost doing an injustice to him to refer particularly to any isolated battlefield. I refer therefore only to the battle of Franklin, Tenn., Nov. 30, 1864, because it is the more recent, and one in which his gallantry was so marked as to merit the admiration of all who saw him.

It was here that his personal bravery was more decidedly brought out, perhaps, than on any other field, and the terrible destruction and defeat which disheartened and checked the fierce assault of the enemy is due more to his heroism and gallantry than to any other officer on the field.

I am unable to recite his entire military history, but confidently refer you to the records and reports of operations in this Department, in which he has acted a most important part. Major-General Stanley is an officer of acknowledged ability, industrious and faithful in the discharge of every duty, alive to the interests of the Government, as well as the welfare of the troops under his command, and in the full exercise of an energetic and persevering devotion to his country, has contributed much to the successful overthrow of the Rebellion.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) GEO. H. THOMAS,

Major-General U. S. A:

Commanding.

I heartily concur with Gen. Thomas in his estimate and classification of the services of Gen. Stanley, and earnestly recommend him for as high rank as can be given him in the reorganization of the army, which must necessarily take place.

(Sgd.) U. S. GRANT,

Lieut.-General.
